FOUL WEATHER ADDS HAZARD TO ENGLAND-MELBOURNE RACE

A popular member of the Hong Kong Police Force was married at the Union Church yesterday when Miss Violet M. Cruikshank, of Scotland, became the bride of Mr. Alexander McRobbie. The photograph shows the bridal group taken after the ceremony. The Misses Joan Shannon and Jenny Logan were the flower-girls. — (King's Studio).

IRISH SOCCER TRIUMPH OVER SCOTS

THE SECURITY OF U.S. VETERANS NOW AIM OF THE "NEW DEAL"

Government Credit Not Jeopardised

ROOSEVELT SPEAKS OUT

SPECIAL TO SUNDAY HERALD.
By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1881. Reprinted October 20, 1934 a.m.)

Roanoke, Virginia, Yesterday.

Dedicating the Veterans' Hospital here yesterday, President Roosevelt said that the security of the nation's forgotten people was the "New Deal's" foremost aim. He assured that business relief expenditures would not jeopardise the Government's credit.

He agreed with those thinking that the country was materially better than last year, and urged veterans to subordinate their demands to assist the Government.

The broader policies for aiding all the destitute, he said, "must remain our objective to eliminate the causes of depression and the drags on prosperity."

"It will cost money," he said. "In spending this money we must have due regard to the good credit of the Government." —United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

AIRCRAFT CARRIER ARRIVES

Fighting Planes Herald Arrival Of "Eagle"

Heralded by a squadron of fighting planes roaring in flight formation at over 100 m.p.h. over the city, the naval aircraft carrier, H.M.S. Eagle, returned to Hong Kong yesterday evening after several months at the summer station in North China.

H.M.S. Eagle is to be replaced by the aircraft carrier H.M.S. Hermes, which was on the China Station a few years ago. H.M.S. Eagle, it is understood, will return to her usual station with the Mediterranean Fleet.

JOCKEY CLUB ENTERPRISE NOT BEING SUPPORTED

Discouraging Comparison Of Pool Figures

The brilliant sunshine yesterday provided a fair test for the Jockey Club's $2 betting innovation and the results, as compared with the pool figures for the first eight races of the September 22 Meeting, the last on the $5 basis, are not encouraging. They are:

Win	Place
September 22 ... $53,075	$54,020
Yesterday ... $45,466	$46,736

The "double" pool figures yesterday were $198 below those of September 22, and $136 below those of the first $2 Meeting.

TRAFFIC COLLISION AT HAPPY VALLEY

Bus And Tram Put Out Of Action

Racegoers leaving the course at Happy Valley yesterday afternoon were confronted with no less than ten trams lined up outside the stands. This, it must be explained, was not a measure by the Transport officials to cope with the abnormal racing and football crowds, but was due to a collision, between a China Motor bus, No. 577, and a tram, No. 24.

The bus which had been rammed from behind, presented a sorrowful sight with its window panes smashed and petrol flowing freely from the rear tank. The tram, which was also badly damaged, was eventually moved by being shunted from behind by another tram.

The passengers in both the motor bus and tram, in which the South Wales Borderers' band were travelling, escaped without injury.

SZCHUAN-HANKOW RAILWAY

Project That Will Cost $200,000,000

Nanking, Yesterday. The Ministry of Railways is reported to be drafting plans for the proposed construction of the Szechuan-Hankow Railway which will take three years to complete. The cost will be approximately $200,000,000.—Reuters.

GOAL IN ARREARS AT INTERVAL AND THEN LOSE 'KEEPER

Dramatic Last-Minute Success

CROWD'S FERVOUR ROUSED

Belfast, Yesterday.

After being led by a goal to nil at the interval, Ireland beat Scotland by 2 goals to 1 in the international soccer championship series to-day.

Though it was raining and the weather showed no signs of clearing a crowd of 35,000 were present at Windsor Park when Scotland won the toss.

Ireland made several quick raids, but the forwards were disappointing and were not receiving the best support from their intermediate line, the passing being weak. Scotland combined better, but play did not reach international standard.

Both goals were heavily bombarded shortly before the interval, and within five minutes of half time Hughie Gallacher scored off an Irish defender.

GOALKEEPER HURT Elisha Scott, the Irish goalkeeper, badly injured his hand after the interval and had to leave the field. McMillen filling his place while Gowdy went to half-back.

With Ireland playing only ten men Scotland monopolised play, but McMillen was magnificent in his unaccustomed role, making several very daring clearances.

The crowd's fervour was roused by Ireland's plucky fight, and they cheered Martin, who, after a grand rally by the Irish team, netted the equaliser 10 minutes before the end from a melee. A minute before time Coulter headed the winning goal from Gowdy's pass amid the wildest enthusiasm.

Ireland thus repeated last year's sensational win.—Reuters.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF Last year Scotland bowed to Ireland by the same score in Glasgow, but the Scots have won 3-2 to Ireland's 5-0 in the full series, four games having been drawn.

Scotland will next play Wales, the holders, in Scotland, on November 21, while Ireland's next match is against England, in England, on February 6.

FIFTEEN PLANES REPORTED AT ROME BUT MYSTERY SHROUDS WHEREABOUTS OF MOLLISONS

GIANT DUTCH PLANE LANDS AT ATHENS AFTER 9 HOURS' NON-STOP FLIGHT

TWO BRITISH COMPETITORS FORCED DOWN BY FOG IN FRANCE SOON AFTER START

AMERICAN ENTRY'S WITHDRAWAL

TREACHEROUS WEATHER CONDITIONS OVER THE CONTINENT HAVE ALREADY DIMMED BRITAIN'S HOPES OF WINNING THE ENGLAND-MELBOURNE AIR RACE WHICH STARTED FROM MILDENHALL AERODROME AT DAWN YESTERDAY MORNING. SCARCELY THREE HOURS AFTER TAKING OFF, CAPTAIN NEVILLE T. STACK, WHO WAS DELAYED 13 MINUTES AT MILDENHALL IN WAITING FOR FILMS OF THE START OF THE RACE, WAS FORCED DOWN IN FRANCE BY FOG. ANOTHER BRITISH COMPETITOR, MR. H. L. BROOK, SUFFERED A SIMILAR FATE A FEW MILES OUT OF PARIS.

No news has been received of most of the other British entries, but it is reported that a Dutch plane and an American plane reached Italy shortly before noon. Two Australian planes and one of the New Zealand entries have reported safely at Marseilles, but a second New Zealand entry landed at Boulogne with engine trouble. The New Guinea plane also landed near Boulogne owing to the weather conditions.

Amazing scenes were witnessed at Mildenhall Aerodrome at 4 a.m. when thousands gathered to see the start of the greatest air race in history. The twenty entries, piloted by the cream of the world's pilots, took off without mishap.

SEVERAL HOURS BEFORE THE START OF THE RACE, VAST CROWDS OF SIGHTSEERS THROGGED TO THE AERODROME. MEN AND WOMEN IN EVENING DRESS, MANY OF WHOM HAD MOTORED FROM LONDON, CROWDED INTO THE ENCLOSURES. MANY PASSED THE TIME BEFORE THE TAKE-OFF IN SINGING AND DANCING.

Mildenhall, Yesterday.

The race began punctually at 6.30 a.m. when, to the accompaniment of cheers from the thronging spectators, Mr. James A. Mollison, with his wife, the former Miss Amy Johnson, as co-pilot of his speedy D. H. Comet machine, took off. Within 17 minutes, all the 20 starters were in the air.

The airspeed A.S. 8, piloted by Captain Neville T. Stack and Mr. S. L. Turner, was thought to have failed to start at the first attempt when the machine taxied back to the starting line. It was later learned, however, that Captain Stack's return was intentional. He waited to pick up a canister of films which had just been taken of the start of the race. He will take them aboard his plane to Melbourne.

By returning to the starting line he lost 13½ minutes.

The Fairey Fox plane, entered by Mr. J. K. C. Baines and piloted by Flying Officer H. D. Gilman, also had two attempts to take off.

MOLLISON'S ESCAPE

The Dutch planes made a perfect take-off, soaring like birds after a very short run down the field, but the three British Comet planes, specially built at a cost of £5,000, experienced some difficulty. The one piloted by J. A. Mollison nearly reached the edge of the aerodrome before the wheels left the ground.

The giant Granville monoplane, entered by the American flyer, Mr. Clyde E. Pangborn, and piloted by Miss Jacqueline Cochran and Mr. Wesley Smith, gave the spectators a thrill as they waited with bated breath for an almost inevitable disaster.

The plane rocked and bumped over the ground and it seemed al-

SIX COMPULSORY STOPS

The actual course to be covered by the competitors will be over 11,000 miles, there being six compulsory stops as follows:

	Miles
London to Baghdad	2,640
Baghdad to Allahabad	2,300
Allahabad to Singapore	2,210
Singapore to Darwin	2,080
Darwin to Charleville	1,380
Charleville to Melbourne	787
Total	11,297

most certain that it would not rise before reaching the fringe of the field. One particularly big bump on the field, however, helped the plane to rise at the crucial moment.

STARTER SURPRISED

A misinterpretation of the flag signal caused the Lockheed "Vega" plane, piloted by Mr. D. C. Bennett and Mr. J. Woods, to start 10 seconds too soon. The pilots, it is believed, thought the raising of the flag was the correct moment to go, and instead of waiting for it to drop, the plane roared into life and was well down the field before the starter had recovered from his surprise. This margin will be adjusted at Singapore, and entails no penalty.

Sir Alfred Bower, the acting Lord Mayor of London, acted as starter, standing on the ground with a red flag which dropped for each machine on the signal from the timekeeper.

Anxious eyes were cast on the weather reports by the contestants, but fears were quickly dispelled when the morning dawned dull, but fairly clear. The weather forecast for the English Channel was fairly good, according to meteorological reports which came through

WORLD NEEDS TO LOOK BACK

Return To Good Old Way Urged

ABOLITION OF ECONOMIC ISOLATION AND NATIONALISM

General Smuts On Leading Problems

London, Yesterday.

The freedom of Dundee was conferred upon General Smuts, in the course of his address in reply he said that the best hope for the world was that in years to come we should return to the good old way to enrich ourselves, not at expense of others, but by enriching others also.

Barbed wire entanglement should be taken down and "No-Mans Land", which was being built up round every country, should be done away with.

In so-called economic isolation and economic nationalism he saw only the doom of trade, the doom of good relationships in the world, and the doom of much that was dear to all.—British Wireless Service.

shortly before the take-off, although the sky was said to be overcast and the visibility moderate.

POOR CONDITIONS

Conditions on the Continent, however, were reported to be "not so good." More encouraging forecasts were received from Turkey and Asia Minor.

TWO MILITARY LEADERS PAY CANTON VISIT

Political Problem Discussion

NANKING—CANTON RELATIONS IMPROVED?

(From Our Own Correspondent) Canton, Yesterday.

Summoned to return to Canton for discussion of important military and political problems, General Li Yang-ching, commanding officer of the Third Army, and General Xu Han-mow, commanding officer of the First Army, arrived here last night from Taya, Southern Kiangsi, and Meihai, Eastern Kwangtung, respectively.

The two generals attended a dinner last night at the residence of General Chen Chi-tang, Commander-in-Chief of the First Group Army, General Lo Choying, commander of the 18th Nanking Division.

While the nature of the discussions is not divulged, it is learned that as regards Communist suppression, the Cantonese forces have been asked to take every step to prevent the Reds in Southern Kiangsi from escaping to Szechuen. The Nanking troops are closing in on the Communists in Southern Kiangsi, but the latter are seeking to preserve their strength by fleeing westward.

LACK OF CO-OPERATION

Over 12,000 Reds under Hsiao Keh and Li Chung-pao succeeded a month ago in getting out of western Kiangsi and reaching Szechuen via southern Hunan. Owing to the lack of co-operation among the provincial forces, (Continued on Page 18.)

Close of play scores were:

TYPHOON MOVING SLOWLY

Manila Gets Fresh Blow

The position of the typhoon, as reported by the Royal Observatory last night, was about 80 miles to the east-south-east of Manila, moving west.

A report from the Manila Observatory, issued by the local American Consulate last night, gave the position of the typhoon to be in about long. 121 east, and lat. 14 north, moving west. This reading is directly over Manila.

WEATHER FORECAST

Fine weather, with moderate north-east winds, was the forecast for to-day, as issued by the Royal Observatory last night.

THE SHADOW AND THE BONE

BY THOMAS BURKE

AND this young man (said Quong) knew nothing of green hills or orchards or harvest fields. He was a slave, and he could see but one of two things—either the chains of his slavery, or a world of legend and imagination where slavery was not. He could see the bald buildings of the world of commerce, and an office and a desk, and the pavements that led him to the desk; and he could see that other world. But he could see nothing between them—nothing of the changing sky or of the sublime mystery of the life that streamed about his daily day.

He was a slave. He lived in Popular, and twice each day, upon six days of the week, he walked the Commercial-road to reach his work at Aldgate, and to return from his work to his lodging in Popular. He knew the pattern of the whole of this two miles of pavement. The cracks in its stones, and the hollows in the wood-blocks of the road, were as familiar to him as the lines of the loathsome book in which he daily wrote columns of figures; as familiar to him as the hills and the stars to the shepherd.

But beyond these lines his eyes jumped the immediate splendours about him into a world that lay a million leagues beyond the ocean at the edge of this planet. For that world nowhere touched his world of chains, and only in that world, he felt, could one be happy. (Slaves always feel like that.)

In it lived people gracious of soul and body, neither slaves nor the masters of slaves. It was a world where the sea was kind, and the breezes were opulent with spice, and life was vibrant with hours that were each a garden of white-winged thoughts.

A world, I need not tell you, that does not exist until you are dead. And perhaps not then.

But one morning he lifted his eyes from the stones that led to the wood of his desk, and his heart said "Oh!"

It was a winter morning, and London was slowly revealing its features in the light of a wan sun, and its streets—even the streets of commerce—were thrilling with impetuous morning life. Great regiments poured through the gorges and the defiles. Doors of offices swallowed them, and as they disappeared reinforcements came from nowhere, and they too were swallowed.

He said "Oh!" because, in lifting his eyes from the stones, he was vouchsafed a vision, and the vision told him that beauty does not dwell only in heaven. Beauty smiled upon him from an advertisement hoarding; a beauty that made all slaves free, and healed their wounds, and blessed them with understanding. It was not the beauty of green hills, or of sea-coast, or of pastures. It was the beauty of a human creature that held all this other beauty distilled in its own human beauty.

The intention of the picture was to proclaim the merits of a certain cigarette, though in this case the picture failed in its intended effect.

Not only did the young man fail to buy cigarettes; he had not even noticed the name of the exceptional cigarette.

But he did notice the picture, and he noticed it with his whole being, so that he stood dumb before the flower whose perfume had pervaded all his dreams. Here was beauty, not of the unattainable world, but of this world.

For the poster was not made from a drawing or a painting; it was no work of a questioning imagination like his own; it was made from a photograph. By this the young man knew that somewhere in the world that girl was living, and this knowledge made the world suddenly desirable, and made Fenchurch-street as cool and green as any avenue of the countries behind the moon.

For the rest of that day, after two minutes' adoration of the picture, his mind was a conflict of extreme misery and extreme rapture—for so does all true beauty affect us. The stain and decay of his daily world were at once intensified and eased. He felt their horror more sharply because of that picture, and yet, because of it, he was soled and strengthened to face them.

He carried it away in his eye, and he saw it, on the walls of the office where he hung his coat, and he saw it on his desk, and on the pages of his ledger; and from whatever angle he saw it the eyes smiled tenderly upon him.

He spent half of his lunch-hour in walking up and down before the picture, and the afternoon—a waste space to be trudged through before he could again drink at the cooling spring—he spent in imagining the girl in her marvellous home; imagining her at her marvellous ten; imagining her marvellous bedroom; imagining the foolish people about her who were blind to the miracle of her; imagining her in different dresses.

He even tortured himself by imagining confident clouds making love to her.

I need not descant upon the ensuing state of this young man. His life was given to a picture; every breath, every thought, every movement centred on it.

He began to spend his evenings walking round those streets of London where posters were displayed. He developed a friendly feeling for those streets where this picture was displayed, and a distaste for those where it was not. One day he found it in the advertisement pages of a newspaper, and he cut it out. And he found it in another newspaper, and he cut it out. And he found it in a weekly journal and he cut it out.

And one of these cuttings he pinned over his bed, and one he pinned over his mirror, and the third he pinned over his fireplace.

Sad and foolish and glorious was the state of that young man. He did not know how happy he was. He thought he was miserable. Thinking thus, he sought for the cause of his misery, and found that it came from a desire to stand face to face with this beauty. Wondering how he could appease that desire, he came to a matter-of-fact solution which seemed to his disordered mind to be an inspiration. If that picture was a photograph, the cigarette company must have bought it from a photographer. If they brought it from a photographer, the photographer must at some time have been in contact with the original. Therefore, he had only to find the photographer, and... then he would throw up his job, and work his way round the world until he tracked this supernal beauty.

And when he had found her he would go to her and say: "Lady, you are beautiful. I worship you!" and then retire for ever into his gallery, his gesture made, his destiny fulfilled; himself a tragic figure among the world's tragic figures.

So he bought some good note-paper and wrote to the cigarette company, stating that he had observed with interest the picture by which they were then advertising their goods—which was fact—and proceeding with the fiction that the photograph was so good that he desired to have some pictures of his wife made by the same photographer. Could they supply him with the name of the photographer?

The cigarette company, with that courtesy which distinguishes those who have anything to sell, expressed their regret that they were not in a position to supply the name of the photographer of the picture in question; they had purchased it from the well-known advertising agency, Slogan and Associates, whose address was such-and-such. They had no doubt that Slogan and Associates would be happy to supply him with the name of the photographer, and They Were, His Faithfully.

So, on the same good note-paper he wrote to Slogan and Associates, and Slogan and Associates, whose offices were spotted with white cards that flamed red-lettered exhortations to their staff to "Do It Now," answered 16 days later that they had purchased the picture in question from a photographer in Blackfriars-road.

That day, during his lunch-hour, to Blackfriars-road he went, heartened on his journey by many a slight of the world's essence of beauty. But at Blackfriars-road he learned that the photographer had left there some time ago, and was now to be found at an address in Camden-Town.

After Big Game

Whenever Captain Nimrod tore to hunt big game in Chotapore.

Until his sorrows soothed by this he fell into a dream of bliss.

The Elephant and Crocodile
 Moved after him with happy ease.

The Lion and the Kangaroo
 Looked on him with admiration.

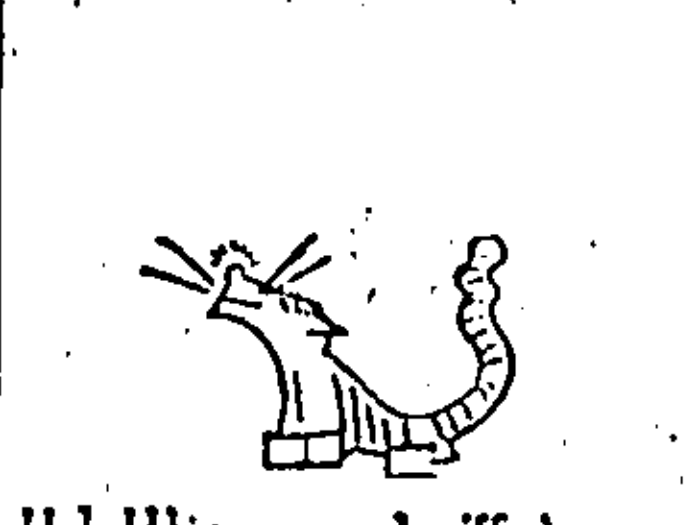

Nine miles away (or maybe ten)
 A tiger couchant in his den.

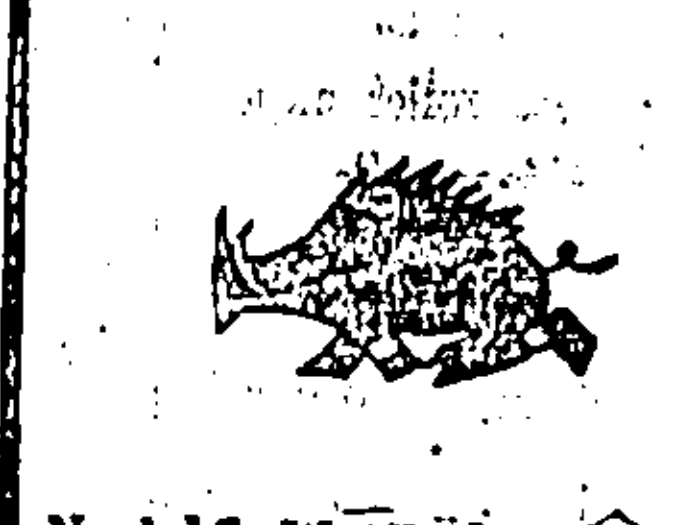

The Boa-Constrictor slithered by
 With untold yearnings in his eye.

The Firm and the Pithed-Snake
 Had behind Cactus trees in furl.

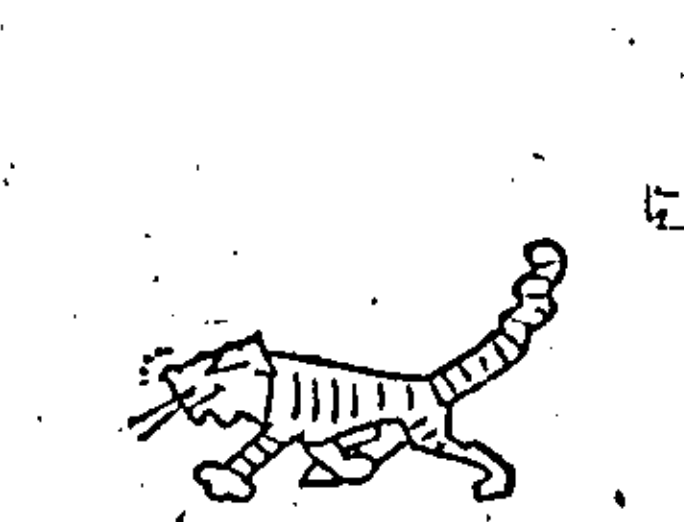

Up he'd his nose, and sniffed aware
 And subtle fragrance in the air.

Now did the Wart Hog linger long
 To join that captivated throng.

And so the Captain, never raked,
 Sought solace in Will's Gold Flake.

Quicker than hare by spring or by rein,
 The Tiger started for the Captain.

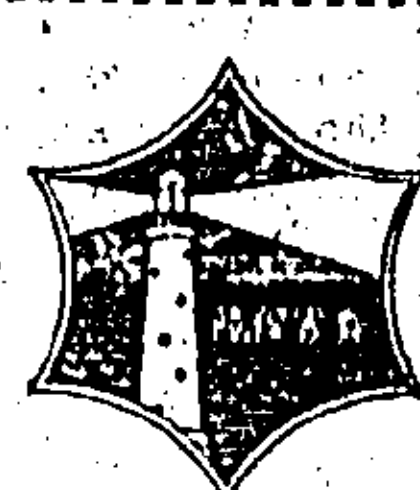

Mark! The most sought-after fellows,
 Are smokers of Will's Gold Flake (Yellow).

Mainly Women

Hair Fashions From Paris

Favoured Ornaments In Headwear

Paris. THERE is a glitter and a glow to everything we wear this winter. The epidemic has even included the hair upon our heady-heads.

An amazing number of elegantly clad women are wearing their hair shaded from dull gold to soft silver. It must be confessed that the colour goes beautifully with the sheen of the new heavy lames, particularly when they are combined with black velvet, as so many of them are.

The gray heads have a distinctly blue tint. Short wavy gray hair worn in delicate curls, and bleached to a tender shade, is rather ethereal under night lights, and hardly less striking by day, with a large black hat tilted to one side and forming a background, the effect is arresting, to say the least. The young fry will have to look to their laurels, or else change their locks to match their elders.

As for ornaments in the hair itself, for the moment, stars and half-moons are, the preference. These are either as clips or fastened on metal bands which partially circle the head. Flowers are used now and then, but next to the stars and moons, the choice seems to run to feathers. Either single wings or entire small birds poised as if for flight at the side of the head.

DINNER DRESSES

THE dinner dress of velvet, crepe or metal, with long sheer sleeves, is worn for dinner, and only for such occasions, in autumn fashions. It still often is high in front, and cut to the waist in the back.

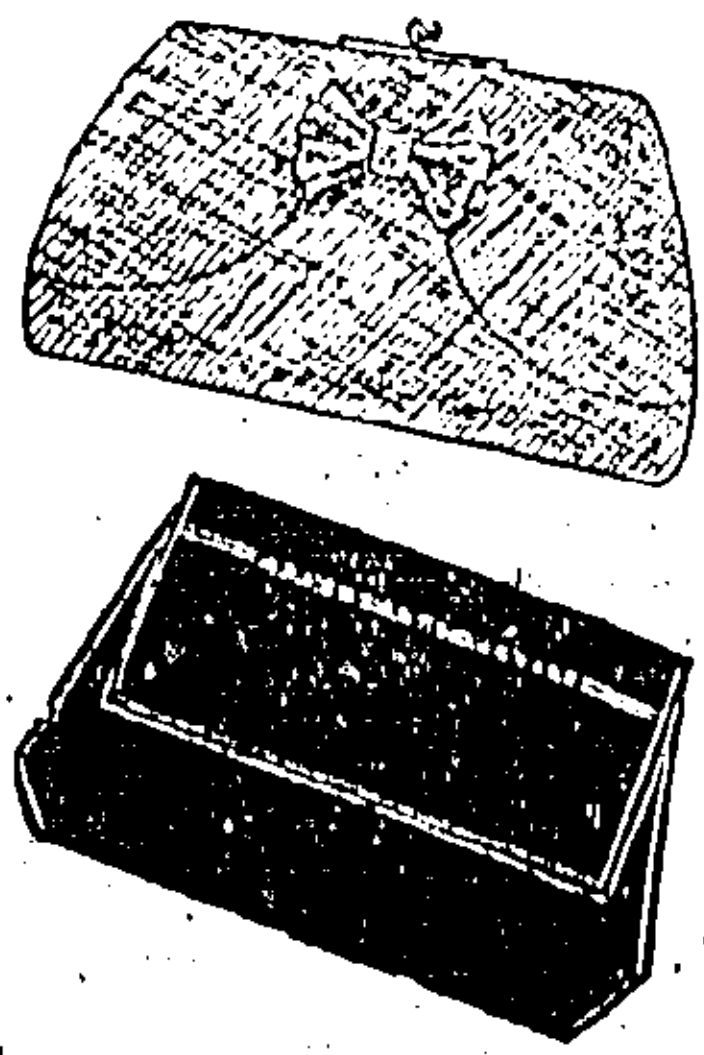

WARM SALT EXCELLENT FOR CLEANING COATS

COOKING salt that has been thoroughly dried and warmed in the oven, is an excellent cleanser for soiled waterproofs, light-coloured cloth coats, canvas covers, and so on. The article to be cleaned must be dry before it is treated. It should be spread out on a table and well sprinkled with the warm salt, which should then be rubbed carefully over the whole surface with a soft dry cloth. All traces of salt should finally be removed by vigorous brushing and shaking.

"POKE BERET"

Paris. MARIA Guy is showing a new hat which is called a "poke beret" because it suggests a poke bonnet in beret form.

High Collars For Formal Wear

SHADES FOR THE YOUNGER SET

"DULL bright" shades are beginning to replace pastels in fashions for the younger set.

VELVET BERETS

ACCORDING to Paris dispatches, the large new berets in velvet are going to be the smartest possible headpiece for autumn.

THE VOGUE FOR SUITS CONTINUES

THE vogue for suits will continue during the autumn, say stylists. Ordering a skirt to match your coat, be it a tailored sports model or a more dressy fur trimmed wrap, is smart for autumn.

More Substantial Than Its Name

End Of The Hatless And Bare Leg Craze

BUTTONS ARE STILL IMPORTANT

GLOVES ARE MORE ORNATE

London.

AMONG the crazes which are definitely out, is the hatless one. No longer do we see the best dressed women tiffing with her hat reposing under the table; and toeless sandals, bare legs and purple toe nails, too, are just that much behind the times that makes all the difference.

Personally one does not mourn the latter, but the stockingless craze certainly helped to cope with the reduced dress allowance, even though leg make-up provided by the thoughtful beauty specialists as an alternative did its best to bring the bills up again.

To come to accessories. Buttons are as important as ever, and they are made of metal, wood, leather, sliced horn or glass, and natural shells. If you are near the seashore collect shells whenever you can, for they continue to decorate coats, jumpers, hats and ears.

Flowers will be used too. There is one designer who has made enchanting earrings composed of two tiny enamelled pansies matching the velvet flowers used for the cape mounted on blue tulle.

Gloves are still more ornate, the tendency being to keep all the decoration on the back of the hand, and all have gauntlets of some kind.

WHEN TRAVELLING WITH BOTTLES

BOTTLES of scent, medicine, and so on have to be packed carefully if their contents are not to spill. To make the cork or stopper absolutely safe, stick a piece of adhesive plaster over the top. Other methods of preventing the stopper from coming out are to put melted candle wax or melted sealing wax round the stopper.

Schoolgirls Routed in Caer Clark Cup

MISS WOOLLEY NETS EIGHT IN A ROW!

The Central British Association Ladies' hockey team recorded an overwhelming victory in their first Caer Clark Cup hockey match this season at King's Park yesterday, defeating the Central British Schoolgirls' team by 10 goals to 1.

The Schoolgirls' defence was unable to cope with the fast play of the Ladies' forward line and fell away before each attack. The goal-keeper, D. Moss, played very well, and could not be blamed for the goals scored against her.

E. Woolley proved to be the outstanding scorer, collecting 8 of the 10 goals.

The team leaves this morning for Manila where they will meet the Philippine athletes in a track and field meet. Part of the team will return to the United States, via Shanghai, where they will give an exhibition. Other members of the team will continue their tour to Singapore and Europe.

The Police Training School ground yesterday afternoon, and this proved to be the only score in the game.

The "Y" Ladies made repeated attempts to equalise, but the opposing forwards and the goal-keeper, G. Roza, proved reliable on each occasion.

M. Woolley, E. Lamell and I. Rogers were the scorers.

RUGBY SEASON OPENS

DRAMATIC TRY THROUGH TATE GIVES CLUB WIN

Brilliant Cut-Through In Last Minute NAVY SIDE UNLUCKY

The Club's premier fifteen defeated a Navy side by two goals and two tries (16 points) to two goals and a try (13 points), in a friendly rugby match at the Valley yesterday. The game was featured by the splendid kicking of the Navy backs and the excellence of the Club forwards.

The Club were fortunate to win. Had it not been for Tate's brilliant cut-through in the last minutes of the game, and his subsequent pass to Ferguson, the Navy would have won.

The handling by the Club backs was not at its best and in the first half McGilchrist and Tate were often seen to fumble a pass. Turner and Robertson were very well marked and made little headway, although it must be said that Robertson performed some thrilling runs—only to end up against a brick wall.

Lammert who made his debut for the Club as full back, will on yesterday's display be an almost certainty for the position throughout the season. His handling and kicking was excellent, while he tackled well and smothered his man perfectly.

Munro and Bradford were outstanding in the Club pack, while Korr, Cummings and Bramble were also to the fore in the loose scrums.

Sub Lt. Christian displayed a very safe pair of hands in defence and kicked a good length, while Franks and Marsh were outstanding among the three-quarters, particularly the former, whose kicking was a feature of the game. Wallace and Darley made a good pair of halves.

The Navy forwards were not seen at their best and were often pulled up for off-side, particularly in the tight scrums.

Sowden's Good Work

Sowden worked like a Trojan and was always to the fore and on the ball, while Evans and Suther were other outstanding forwards.

The Navy opened their scoring after 10 minutes when Sowden broke away from a dribble on the left wing to dash over in the corner. Suther failed to add the points.

After several attempts had failed owing to poor handling among the backs, Meeko equalised for Club in brilliant fashion, when he picked up and evaded Christian to score. Turner failed with the kick.

A fine bout of passing saw the Navy press and not many minutes after the Club's try, the Navy went ahead once again through Franks, who brilliantly took a low pass to evade Lammert and score between the posts. Suther converted.

Nothing daunted the Club forwards played the game of their life and several good forward movements were seen, Munro, Cummings, Bradford and Korr being prominent.

CLUB DESERVE WIN

The Club maintained their undefeated record at Sookunpoo yesterday when they defeated the Lincolns by three clear goals.

The Club deserved to win, but the Lincolns should have netted the ball on more than one occasion.

Howe strengthened his goal average, scoring two goals and being instrumental in scoring the third, his being the shot that was deflected into the net by Ash.

Howe played a good game, but not up to the standard of his previous games this season.

The defence of both teams were capable of holding the opposing attack. Whilst the Saints were compelled to field a weakened forward line, South China were at full strength.

Leonard's Great Display Leonard was the mainstay of the Saints' defence, and played a remarkable game. He was often the only barrier between the South China forwards and the goal, but usually proved too hard to pass. His partner—Souza—also gave a magnificent display, and proved that their defence is one of the strongest in the Colony.

Lim was quite confident in goal, and the shots that defeated him would have passed any keeper.

The halves were the weak link. Costa in the pivotal position could not hold the nippy Chinese forwards. G. Fernandes tackled well, but, having obtained possession, was apt to overkick, and his efforts were wasted.

The Club gave their supporters a thrill at Sookunpoo when they defeated the Lincolns by three clear goals to take second position in the league to South China "B" who only just defeated St. Joseph's after a very even tussle.

Defeating the South Wales Borderers, the South China Second Division team now lead this division as the only team without a goal scored against them.

A PRECEDENT WAS PROVIDED IN THE THIRD DIVISION WHEN THE GAME BETWEEN THE RAILWAYS AND THE CLUB DE RECREIO WAS ABANDONED 11 MINUTES BEFORE TIME, THE PLAYERS HAVING GOT BEYOND CONTROL AFTER A SERIES OF WARNINGS. IN ADDITION TWO PLAYERS WERE ORDERED OFF THE FIELD IN YESTERDAY'S GAMES.

RECREIO BOWLS SUCCESS

Beat K.B.G.C. By 25 Shots In Friendly

TIE ON ONE RINK

The Club de Recreio defeated the Kowloon Bowling Green Club by 25 shots in a friendly lawn bowls match on the latter's green yesterday.

The Club forwards were fair, Baldwin and Fowler playing excellently on their respective wings. Ernie Strange made some clever moves, but Dudley held him well.

The Lincolns' defence played well. Higgins in goal saving good shots from Howe and Pote-Hunt on many occasions. Ash and Edmundson were good in the back line and cleared well, though they were very ably assisted in this respect by Dudley.

The forwards were not so good. During the first half they were somewhat handicapped in having only four men up in the attack—Ridley having dropped behind to look after Pote-Hunt.

On the whole the Club were a better team and deserved to win, but the game was a very keenly contested one, both teams playing good football until the final whistle.

Club Score Early The first goal of the game was almost a gift for the Club. After 10 minutes of ding-dong play from end to end, Gamble sent a pass

OF IMPORTANCE TO MOTHERS — SOME "KLIM" FACTS

The casein (the curd of milk) of KLIM precipitates in fine, soft, friable curds which are easily digested and assimilated. The value of such is indicated by the fine curd characteristic of breast milk.

In the Klim spray process the large fat globules of the fresh milk are broken into very small globules, THUS EXPOSING A LARGER SURFACE for digestion and assimilation.

These advantages undoubtedly account for the better growth curves obtained with Klim. A famous pediatricist found that on the average, children gained weight faster on Klim.

KLIM is a product of the Borden Co. known as the largest manufacturers of milk products in the world. It is your assurance of a food of the highest integrity.

INFANT PRODIGES OF SPORT

Precocity & The Making Of Champions

Medico On Way To Achieve Optimum Results

(BY DR. ADOLPHE ABRAHAM)

NANCY JUPP, aged 13, on September 14, won the Girls' Golf championship at Stoke Poges, near Cox, aged 11, on September 13, beat a man of 30 in the South of England Lawn Tennis championships.

Schoolboys nowadays put up performances on the running track which would have won world's championships 40 years ago.

What conclusions can we deduce from the achievements of these youthful prodigies of sport? What can we reasonably expect in the way of their future development?

Should their activities be discouraged both in regard to general physical well-being and the danger of jeopardising the prospect of supreme athletic attainments through early excesses?

That is a particularly vital question at a time when we appear to be producing many examples of precocity in sport.

In the first place it is essential to separate those exercises which demand peculiar skill of co-ordination from those in which mere speed or endurance are required. It is natural to walk and run; you have to learn to play cricket, lawn tennis, and golf, or to row, although constitutional aptitude varies enormously in the latter.

Apart, too, from natural gifts, there is considerable variability in technique. Not a few rowing blues never handled an oar until they reached the 'Varsity'; but could anybody seriously imagine a first-class cricketer being produced, whatever his inborn talent, unless his training was begun in boyhood and continued along the right lines throughout the malleable adolescent years of his life?

Until comparatively recently the veterans dominated lawn tennis. One of the British hard court champions of not so long ago was a grandfather. But we are more and more coming to see the necessity of a similar early education now that this game has been accepted as the battle-ground where speed as well as experience is indispensable.

Prodigies Who Fall To Last

What the position may be in the case of golf I hesitate to say. Nobody can be indifferent to the complexity of the technique of the game, but the training must necessarily be less exacting in the case of a stationary ball, apart from the less strenuous physical concomitants.

Turn now to the simpler problem of athletics. How many schoolboy prodigies on the track ultimately develop into the super-athlete? Perhaps one in a generation. On the other hand it is easy to quote dozens of examples of athletes whose early achievements encouraged the prediction of phenomenal performances in later life, and yet who have contributed to the dismal failures with which the history of athletics is rich.

The obvious explanation of many, if not all, such failures is the occurrence of heart strain, or the more general state which has been somewhat picturesquely described as that of the burn-out athlete, who pays the penalty of premature deterioration succeeding early precocity.

The Deterioration Period

Such an explanation is not without its attraction. It condones prophetic deficiencies, and it satisfies the athlete himself by supplying a plausible excuse for his failure and carrying with it the suggestion of martyrdom.

But I, personally, am not at all easily persuaded by this "burn-out athlete" explanation. I regard the development of the athlete as a graph which is rarely if ever one of continuous upward progress. In nearly all examples there is a period of stagnation and even of deterioration, a period which frequently coincides with a critical stage in adolescence between public school and university. A fatalistic acceptance of what is called "strain" frequently leads to athletics being entirely abandoned—and yet with perseverance or encouragement, the ordinary course of development may quite well be maintained.

I think there is no doubt that if this view could be more generally accepted, the boy of early promise might more often become the man of great achievement.

Case of Past Champions

As the greatest English track performers of recent times I would select Lieut. G. Rampling, Lord Burghley, T. Hampson, and H. M. Abraham; and their careers supply evidence in support of the thesis I am advancing. Of these, H. M. Abraham was a real infant athletic prodigy, yet between the year of 12 and 18 he was of very ordinary calibre. At this latter age he began to exhibit first-class ability. From 21 to 22 he suffered another temporary deterioration, followed by a steady improvement into the super class.

Lieut. Rampling was an unknown runner until the age of 20. The others were runners above the average, but without the faintest early suggestion of the supreme ability they ultimately exhibited. Is there any lesson to be learned from this, any practical policy to be laid down?

If I had the capability to recognise in a child a really great natural runner, I would discourage all track activities beyond the most trivial until the age of 18, if he were a sprinter. I would dissuade him even longer if he were a distance runner in embryo; and provided he kept fit and observed the ordinary laws of health I would retard the Marathon type of runner until he was 23 or 24.

I believe that in this way the optimum results would be obtained.

No Two Cases Identical

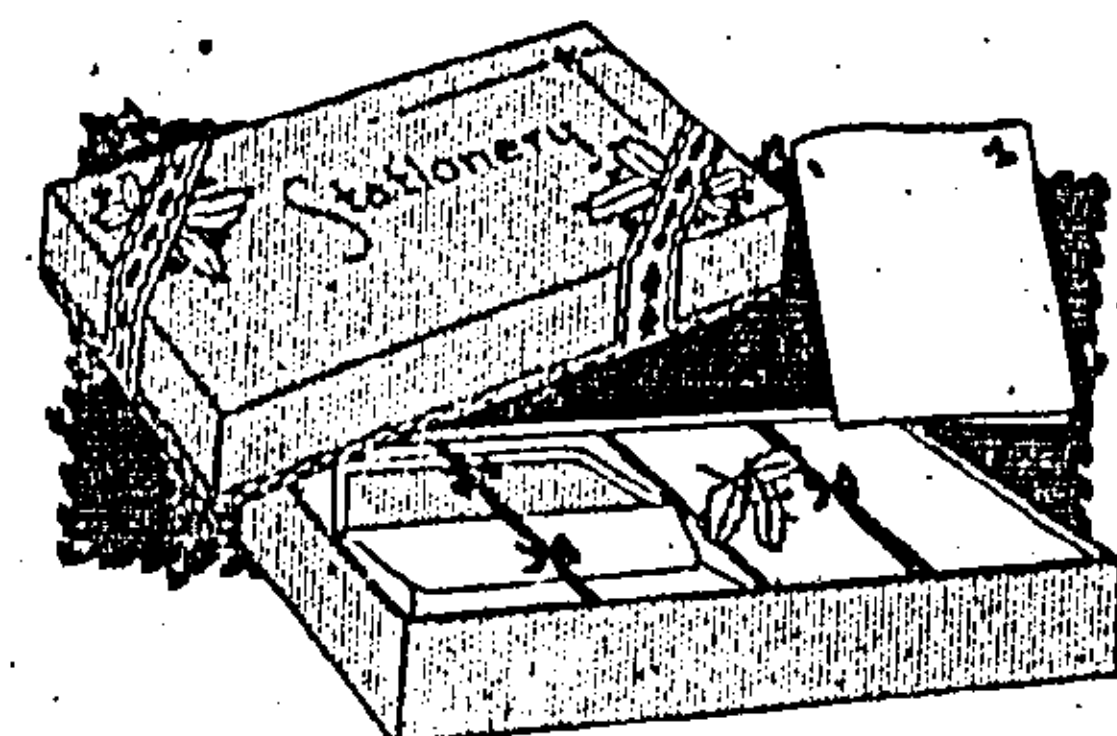

Of course, such an opinion is not amenable to proof. You cannot have simultaneous experiments of an opposite character upon the same subject, and though analogies may be drawn when apparently similar examples are studied, no two cases can ever be identical.

the claims made are proved a fallacy? Would you is a powerful force in educating as to the uses, the people are the judges when they make their first demand, and the scrap heap of failures is piled with goods that could not stand the test of public judg-

out the civilised world is simple, because it fulfils its purity is its safety, and its quick action the

I have been suffering from Rheumatism and Rheumatoid

Arthritis for 12 to 14 years. I have taken a course of your

'ASPRO' Tablets—three after each meal—and often, when in pain, have taken an extra dose before going to bed.

I obtained very great relief from this treatment; in fact, I do not know how I could have continued to move about without 'ASPRO'.

The pain has gradually improved.

and now I find I need to take

'ASPRO' only occasionally. I can confidentially recommend 'ASPRO' to all sufferers from rheumatism.

C.B.A. SCORE TEN TIMES IN FIRST HOCKEY MATCH

A. Beavis opened the scoring, and M. Smith secured the tenth goal. The Schoolgirls obtained their only goal through Miss H. Knill, who scored from a penalty-bully in the last few minutes of the game against Miss Walker.

K. Moir was the outstanding Schoolgirl, her play at centre-half being exceptionally good. Although routed, the inexperienced Schoolgirls, on the whole, put up a creditable display, some good work being put in by E. Rousseau, R. Stephenson and A. Martin.

The Schoolgirls now wear an attractive uniform with a skirt, instead of the kahl trousers and shirt of last season.

CORRESPONDENCES.P.C.A. IN NEED OF SUPPORT

[To the Editor, "Sunday Herald"]

Sir,—The Annual Drive for financial support for carrying on the work of the Hong Kong Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is now drawing to a close and it is requested that everyone interested in the welfare of animals will make a special effort to send in his or her subscription, or donation, as early as possible to the Honorary Secretary, Mr. W. J. Cole, c/o Messrs. Thomson and Co., York Building.

The General Committee fully appreciate that in these times of universal trade depression it is indeed most difficult for many people in the Colony, although keenly desirous of helping all deserving causes, to meet the various calls that are now made upon their charity and especially at this season of the year. It is felt confident, however, from past experience that donors and subscribers will do their utmost again to give the Society their fullest support on this occasion. No work like ours can advance, or even continue, without generous support from the public.

One cannot publish in a letter many details connected with the problem of cruelty to animals but it might briefly be mentioned that at present the Society maintains two whole time European Inspectors who, in addition to various other duties, are in charge of the Dogs' Home (the construction of our new Dogs' Home at Kowloon is now nearing completion); patrol streets; visit premises where animals, poultry and birds are kept; visit ships carrying livestock; visit wharves and supervise the landing of cattle, etc., and areas where poultry are unloaded from lorries. Much of the work of the Inspectors is of an educational nature as the Society does not as a rule undertake any prosecutions except in serious cases of cruelty or where advice and warnings have been disregarded.

The farmer, the slaughter man and all engaged in any way in the livestock trade produce only what is required to meet our demands and therefore we each have a share of responsibility in the work of ensuring that our Agents at least act in a humane manner.

Funds are urgently required to enable the Society to carry on its work during the ensuing year. The strictest economy is exercised in administration.

Thanking you very sincerely for

INFANT PRODIGIES OF SPORT

But in regard to games of skill, clearly no such policy will do. The necessarily prolonged education of the nervous system must be begun in the malleable stage. Where is the risk of "strain" in such circumstances?

Strain, as I visualise it, is not of the heart or any individual organ or tissue, but of the whole body and particularly of the nervous system, an alteration which is comparable to the molecular disturbance of the particles in a piece of metal which has been exposed to abnormal stress.

In the intensive competition of modern golf and lawn tennis tournaments, apart from the physical circumstances, there are the complex processes concerned in focussing attention, together with such mental factors as excitement, apprehension, anxiety, disappointment, and the like.

Regarding the nervous system, it is always difficult to separate physical from purely psychological effects, but it is worth remembering that a very famous athlete in reviewing his career expressed the opinion that the greatest risk he had taken was not of an enlarged heart—but an enlarged head.

This further evidence of your courtesy.

The Treaty Of Washington

JAPAN'S abrogation of the Treaty of Washington need not be taken too seriously. If it is desired to amend a treaty the usual procedure is to give notice of abrogation and then proceed to negotiate another agreement which often may not differ from the former terms by any very great margin. The present notice of abrogation could hardly have been withheld after all that has been said in the last two years without making the Government look rather ridiculous; the representatives that have been sent to London to have preliminary discussions are the only people that are in a position to know what is behind the move in detail. But the notice brings a rather long and eventful chapter to an end, and is the beginning of a new balance of power in the Pacific.

It is to be hoped that our diplomats will take note of the very large influence of sentiment in this move, and will avoid proposing any alternative which will give new reason for sensible arrangements to be neutralised or upset by appeals to national pride. The real grounds for the dislike of the treaty are two, one of which is that in the Nine Power Treaty, which was one of the instruments signed at Washington, all the signatories undertook not to make any territorial acquisitions at the expense of China, and that signature is awkward for Japan in face of her Manchurian action; the second is that the smaller ratio of capital ships allotted to her in the instrument which dealt with naval force she was apparently put in an inferior class to the two Powers who were allowed to have more ships. This feeling being one of sentiment is not to be removed by the very obvious consideration that she can have the whole of her navy on the spot in her own waters while the other Powers will never be able to send more than a portion of their fleets, and will even then be hampered by want of a base close at hand. It is as obvious to Japan as to any one else that, as Sir Roger Keyes said in Parliament the other day "believe me, as a sailor, Japan is untouchable in her own waters." It is not, therefore, for self-defence that the treaty is to be scrapped.

Alarmists will then proceed to guess what all manner of maleficent schemes to be executed when what the sensational papers refer to as "the crisis of 1935" arrives. The simple answer to any tremors on that ground is that if Japan is looking for trouble there is nothing in any written treaty that would prevent it, for no attention has been paid to the existing treaty obligations; moreover there would be nothing in the abrogation which would lessen the opportunities or resources of the Power that might be threatened to protect themselves or to assist each other. One quite possible outcome might be that Great Britain and the U.S.A. should simply renew the existing treaty without Japan, who would then be in a worse position than she is in while the treaty still stands.

It is easy to forget the long record of consideration for the national susceptibilities of Japan. Far back England occupied a small island in the Japanese seas called Port Hamilton, at a time when the Japanese navy hardly existed, in order to keep the freedom of the seas from disturbance by force. That was given up because it was objected to by Japan, with whom we were then on very friendly terms. Then Russia began to become a danger, and with Germany and France deprived Japan of Port Arthur. Wei Hai Wei was occupied on lease from China, the lease to run as long as Russia occupied Port Arthur; and after our alliance had served its purpose of securing a free field for defence of Korea and Manchuria from annexation by Russia this port was found to be a source of suspicion to our former Allies as though it had become a menace to themselves. The rendition was delayed for some time owing to the chaos which made it impossible to be sure which was the proper authority to hand it over to; but the port was duly returned. It would be ungracious not to acknowledge the help loyally given by the Japanese fleet in the Great War in conveying troops when our ships were otherwise engaged; and it was because of that that we were unwilling to cancel the treaty when it lapsed until we had substituted the various Washington instruments that had the effect of enlarging the guarantee of security without withdrawing it. The essence of the matter is that Japan does not now feel the want of any alliance and feels that any such guarantee is derogatory to her standing as one of the Great Powers. There is no reason why that should not be recognised without any undue attention to alarmist prophecies. If honour is satisfied the motives for aggressive action are greatly decreased.

LANGUAGE AND INTERNATIONAL UNDERSTANDING

UNDER the auspices of the Hong Kong League of Nations Society a lecture is to be given on Tuesday next, October 23rd at the Cathedral Hall at 5.15 by Mr. Bruno Lasker on the above subject. Mr. Lasker is the Associate Editor of "Pacific Affairs," and is very well known for his knowledge and experience of this subject. The cooler evenings have once more made it possible to sit in a meeting indoors with comfort, and nothing has happened to make it less important to give serious thought to the enormous problem of how to abate the flood of suspicion and fear which seems to be rising in the Far Eastern countries. The real problem is not to find a reasonable settlement of such differences as may exist. It is to persuade the ordinary man who reads very little or not at all that a reasonable settlement is being sought. At Geneva the procedure of printing the speeches beforehand, and the babel of interpreters long ago killed any prospect of a real debate, and therewith committed the crime of making the advocacy of peace dull. Some time ago we suggested that Geneva should make more use of the wireless. The explanations of even so competent an observer as Mr. Vernon Bartlett do not fill the bill; they are not the firsthand voice of a responsible advocate. And they are only in one language. As President Coolidge said, "of real education and of the real information we cannot have too much; but of propaganda we cannot have too little. Propaganda seeks to present a part of the facts, to distort their relations, and to force conclusions which could not be drawn from a complete and candid survey of all the facts." Mr. Lasker's subject will not be dry to anyone who realises the enormous harm being done from day to day by sheer misunderstanding.

EX-PRESIDENT POINCARÉ

LAST week was rather notable for the deaths of several men who left their mark on history, and no one who was President of France during the war could fail to do that. Raymond Poincaré was the descendant of a great mathematician, and was himself a very able and original practitioner of that science. Consistently with that gift he was a methodical recorder in his diaries of the events of each day, and the massive volumes of his memoirs leave very little for the historian to investigate; in fact the trouble of the future historian of the last twenty years will not be a lack but an embarrassment of materials. He was no friend of Clemenceau's, and their differences sometimes made it very difficult for our War Office to hit on a common policy; but his temperament led him to treat most colleagues as mathematical symbols. This was his strength when he set himself to restore the franc to stability; a more sympathetic man could hardly have resisted the appeals against the economic shears that he wielded without regard of persons. The Versailles Treaty, now regarded by most Englishmen as too drastic he considered too mild, and for good or evil (Continued on Page 15.)

THE AIR DREAMS THEN AND NOW

FLYING PROGRESS SINCE BLERIO T'S FEAT

AMAZING DEVELOPMENTS

(By Our Aviation Correspondent.)

THE year 1934 will be an epic for aviation. Although only a quarter of a century has passed since the French engineer, Louis Blériot, caused a sensation by crossing the English Channel—a journey of 21 miles—planes yesterday started out on a journey of 11,000 miles that may be accomplished by to-morrow night! Blériot's flight came the dawn of the air age. Now, these 25 years later, an average of 80 passengers and freight-carrying aeroplanes cross the English Channel every day, while from Croydon and other big airports, monster airliners leave hourly carrying passengers, mails, and freight to every part of the civilised world. What will the next few years bring? Some views on the future of aviation are given in this article by the pioneer Blériot. I have repeatedly asked questions concerning the burning problem of the hour: whether or not the aeroplane has become a factor for peace or a deadly weapon of destruction. The dream we old pioneers of the air had was that the aeroplane, a celestial machine, would bring the nations closer together by ignoring all political and natural frontiers. Ideals of Aviation That was the ideal of the heroic age of flying. Alas! the Great War showed us that human rivalry has seized our conquest. If I may venture a word of advice as to the best way for Great Britain and France to protect themselves against the possibility of air attack, I would say that a lasting political and military entente is the surest guarantee. So soon as our two great nations are agreed on international questions and strive to eliminate useless commercial rivalry, no one will dare to trouble the peace of the world. All other steps that may be taken must, if they are to serve any useful purpose, be based on this solid foundation—which nothing can replace. I am not sufficiently aware of the present state of Great Britain's air force.

Hong Kong Personalities

THE HON. MR. E. D. C. WOLFE.

This is the twelfth of the exclusive "Sunday Herald" series of sketches of leading Colony residents by Mr. A. S. Kong, the talented Hungarian artist.

NEW Colony residents have said goodbye to Hong Kong and carried away with them a greater store of reminiscence than the Inspector-General of Police, the Hon. Mr. Edward Dudley Corscadden Wolfe, who leaves for Home on retirement on Tuesday.

Turbulent times have reigned in the Colony during Mr. Wolfe's term of office, but these have only served to stress the efficiency of the police system under his leadership. But Mr. Wolfe's work has not always been confined to policing. In 1899, as head of the Sanitary Department, it was his acumen that led to the abolishment of human propulsion and the introduction of bullocks for transport work in the Sanitary Service.

It was on the completion of the Kowloon-Canton Railway that he purchased the animals that had been used for haulage work and used them for a similar purpose here. Later, he purchased other beasts from the markets for $35 or $40 each, and after using them for several years sold them back to the butchers with little or no loss.

Mistaken For Pirate!
Mr. Wolfe, who has hunted pirates, recalls with some amusement, the occasion when he himself, together with several companions, was mistaken for a pirate. This was in the days when he was studying Chinese in Canton. He was returning up the river on a small launch after an eventful trip, when it was decided to break the monotony of the journey with a little revolver practice on floating bottles. The programme, however, was rudely interrupted by a shell from a Chinese gunboat which opened fire across their bows on hearing the revolver shots. (Continued on Page 15.)

"Ovaltine is nice! I'm glad it's good for me"

THE delicious flavour of "Ovaltine" makes it a great favourite with children. And that is fortunate — for "Ovaltine" supplies, in abundant measure, the additional nourishment which children need to make good the energy they spend so prodigally all day long.

"Ovaltine" is prepared from the highest qualities of malt extract, creamy milk and new-laid eggs.

But remember, it must be "Ovaltine." Unlike imitations, "Ovaltine" does not contain household sugar to give it bulk and to cheapen the cost, nor does it contain a large percentage of cocoa. —Reject substitutes.

Mr. Wolfe admits that he and his companions obtained little satisfaction from the "incident," the gunboat commander explaining that he was justified in mistaking them for pirates (despite the fact that the assistance of a pair of binoculars would have informed him to the contrary) while the British Consul in Canton expressed little sympathy with the victims.

The Family Pig

The fact that pirate-hunting has its humorous side is also proved by an experience which befell Mr. Wolfe in March 1927, when he went with a punitive party aboard H.M.S. Frobbisher to clean up a Bias Bay village. Cautiously approaching one of the huts in search of hidden marauders, Mr. Wolfe failed to reckon with the family pig until the startled animal dashed from the doorway and upset him in an effort to squeeze between his legs.

A second expedition to Bias Bay in September of the same year again rendered Mr. Wolfe a "casualty," only the second upset, had more serious consequences. While walking down the beach he caught his foot in a cleft rock and was thrown headlong on to the beach. The fall completely winded him, and it was some months before he could laugh without experiencing a sharp pain in the vicinity of his ribs.

Village Battle

Among Mr. Wolfe's most cherished memories is a trip made with several companions in 1909 along the Kowloon-Canton Railway, just before its completion. They arrived at Shumchun shortly after a gang of labouring coolies had held up the engineer, Mr. Roberts, and compelled him to pay their wages following the default of a sub-contractor, and helped in the attempt to recover some of the money. The journey was made by pony, and included an impromptu gymnastic on the banks of the river at Shek-lung. The party were also spectators at a feudal battle between two nearby villages and were immensely amused at the operations which appeared to consist of the firing of a cannon about every 20 minutes. They reluctantly departed when the villagers started their evening meal and were told that the battle had been adjourned until the following day.

Lok Ma Chau Murder

In speaking of his experiences, Mr. Wolfe is prone to skip the more dangerous incidents of his career in favour of the lighter side, but it can be recalled that he personally led the attack on Lok Ma Chau police station a few years ago, when an Indian constable ran amuck, and, after shooting dead Mrs. Madgewick, the wife of the European sergeant, barricaded himself on the premises. Mr. Wolfe, although wearing a vest that was proof only against revolver bullets, advanced with volunteers to the station premises, despite the fact that the berserk constable was armed with a rifle and a Lewis gun.

The eleven previous sketches were of Sir William Shenton Kt., the Hon. Mr. W. H. Bell, Sir William Hornell, Kt., C.B.E., LL.D., M.A., the Hon. Dr. R. H. Kotewall, C.M.G., LL.D., Commander F. U.S. ARMY BUYS1467 WESTINGHOUSE REFRIGERATORS

The War Department of the United States has awarded a contract to the Westinghouse Company for 1467 refrigerators, in continuation of their policy of equipping their officers' quarters in various posts throughout the country with modern conveniences.

The order was given to Westinghouse only after exhaustive tests had been made of their refrigerator in competition with seven of their most prominent competitors.

This is indeed a glowing tribute to the superiority of Westinghouse refrigerators.

First cost was not the main consideration, in the United States Army's decision, to place their order for Westinghouse. Their principal concern was to obtain a refrigerator which would give them satisfaction for years to come at a minimum operating and serving cost.

Offensive Advantage

I wish to draw particular attention, too, to the tremendous advantage which the offensive will always confer in the matter of air warfare. By secretly preparing and launching a mass air attack an enemy can obtain a long start.

I think that vigilance should never be relaxed. Without advocating too strict a doctrine, I believe that Great Britain and France, in their common interest, should hold inter-allied air manoeuvres. This would be an additional guarantee against a surprise attack and would help to counter the unknown factor which constitutes the great danger of a sudden air attack.

This guarantee is almost entirely lacking to-day, when the attackers and the defenders are equipped and trained on the same principles. Obviously, it would affect national susceptibilities, but I do not think that that would be of any greater importance than in an international sporting event.

It is perfectly plain that Germany, who has contributed greatly to the progress of aerial science, seeks to occupy a dominating position in international flying.

I believe, nevertheless, that a natural and logical understanding could be reached with Germany whereby she would concentrate her activities upon dirigibles serving regular air lines and aeroplanes running upon fixed schedules.

Great Britain would develop in particular, her Empire communications, and France would specialise in ultra-rapid air communications.

Small Planes' Purpose

The aeroplane to-day, employed for peaceful purposes, is definitely winning its true domain—long-distance flying. Codon and Rossi, flying recently from New York to Paris in an aeroplane of only 500 h.p., and then once more crossing the Atlantic in the opposite direction in the same machine, demonstrated that it is possible to carry across the ocean the equivalent of 200,000 letters or 25 passengers.

I am quite of the opinion that the future of the British Empire and of France's overseas Empire depends primarily upon air communications.

I believe that for small aircraft designed for this purpose amphibious machines will be the best, in fact almost obligatory, and for the heavier types of passenger-carrying machines what we call in France an "avionmarin" (a land type of plane which can ride the seas in case of a forced landing on the water) which should be devoted

Colony Trade Figures

SEPTEMBER FIGURES

The total imports of merchandise into the Colony in the month of September, 1934, amounted to a declared value of $37.2 millions ($2.9 millions), as compared with $43.5 millions ($3.0 millions) in September of 1933; a decrease in terms of local currency of 14.5 per cent.

Exports of merchandise totalled $29.4 millions ($2.3 millions), as compared with $34.7 millions ($2.4 millions) a decrease of 15.1 per cent.

For the first nine months of 1934, imports totalled $302.1 millions ($22.3 millions), as compared with $381.1 millions ($25.5 millions) in the corresponding period of 1933, a decrease of 20.7 per cent; while exports were valued at $237.6 millions ($17.5 millions), as compared with $307.0 millions ($20.5 millions) in the corresponding period of 1933, a decrease of 22.6 per cent.

The following table shows the comparative figures of imports and exports (including treasure) during the months of September, 1934 and September, 1933:—

Imports
Sept. 1934	Sept. 1933
Merchandise	$37,152,862 $43,508,242
Treasure	$ 5,731,652 $ 5,225,534
Total	$42,884,514 $48,733,776
Exports
Sept. 1934	Sept. 1933
Merchandise	$29,432,184 $34,672,091
Treasure	$ 9,744,426 $13,436,592
Total	$39,176,610 $48,108,683

ed to long-distance flying over both land and sea.

Non-Stop Round World

A non-stop flight around the world is by no means impossible now.

The old plane the Joseph-le-Brix, piloted by Codon and Rossi, which was built in 1929, has proved that it could fly round the world at the latitude of Iceland. Its successor, the building of which was postponed for lack of funds, would be able to fly round the world at the latitude of London by using a special propeller and a low-consumption engine.

By refuelling in the air any modern aeroplane can fly round the world at the Equator.

But I do not think the earth will be encircled just yet by air at the Grand Circle, because there is nothing useful to be gained by it. A machine with a radius of action of 12,500 miles (20,000 kilometres) is all that is needed to-day to reach by air any point on our globe.

THE PASSING HOUR

he took the responsibility of ruining the German recovery in order to secure by the occupation of the Ruhr District the ideal of a French Rhine which had been rejected by the Allied Powers. When Lord Curzon crossed over to Paris to re-monstrate the interview ended in a torrent of personal invective which must be unique in diplomatic history. Making no reply the British Minister sought his Secretary's room and subbed on to a sofa in tears exclaiming "I cannot stand that little man; I cannot stand him." Neither Germany nor France nor Europe has yet got to the end of the effects of that policy; it was a big responsibility for any man to take.

LORD BUXTON

A lesser man in every way, but a very consistent worker for peace passed away by the death of Lord Buxton, who had just recently been appointed to the Committee to consider General Hertzog's claim to take over the Native Protectorates in South Africa. He was Governor-General and High Commissioner at the time of the Convention which assembled to draw up a constitution for the Union of South Africa, and was on very intimate terms of friendship with General Botha and the other leading men. The work had been begun by Lord Selborne, and was greatly helped by the Chief Justice, Lord de Villiers. But it owed much to Lord Buxton's tact and genuine Liberalism. He was always available for consultation in the background when it would have been fatal for him to be in the foreground. The change of mortality combined on the same date two names of men who could not have been more different in temperament, ideals, and achievements.

SOUTH CHINA WIN OVER SAINTS BUT NOT CONVINCINGLY

Of the forwards, Lee worked hard, and sent over some good centres, but those were of little avail. Ward was not his customary self, appearing slow and uncertain. Santos could not get going, and is rather on the small side to be a successful leader.

South China's inside trio were again the pick of the forward. They excelled in approach work, especially Lai Shui Hon, whose diagonal passes to the opposite wing were a feature of the game.

Li Has No Luck

Li Shek Yau displayed an inclination to shoot at the least opportunity. At least two of his shots skimmed the bar, and with a little luck would have been goals. Yeung Sui Yick combined well with Lai, but did not have so much of the play as usual, and consequently had few chances to shine.

The defence was solid. The halves, Lim in particular, tackling cleanly and seldom wasting the ball.

Cheuk Shek Kam opened the scoring for South China midway through the first half. There was no further score before the interval. After the interval, the Saints raided South China's goal on a number of occasions, but could not net the ball. From a free kick awarded just outside the penalty area, Costa sent in a pile driver which Wong did well to hold.

Young struck the cross bar with a shot, and as the ball came back into play, Tsang King Ki, with a double overhead kick, caught the ball on the side of his foot, and sent it past Lim for a brilliant goal.

KOWLOON SURPRISE EAST LANCS

Sterling Defence Holds Up Military Line

LAWTON'S GREAT DISPLAY

Kowloon surprised the East Lancers in their encounter at Kowloon yesterday when they annexed the two points by 2 goals to 1.

Kowloon combined in better style than on former occasions and made the most of the opportunities which came their way. The East Lancers, forwards on the other hand, though their approach work was excellent, failed to finish convincingly and lost many a promising opening.

Elliot Shines

Elliot figured prominently, and G. White exhibited an aptitude for first-time efforts, Oxford bringing off some very fine saves from his shots. The Knox brothers, on opposite wings, centred well and D. Knox showed a powerful kick on several occasions, one effort, in particular, being the subject of a spectacular save by Oxford.

Gilchrist and Whitehead, with the unobtrusive and constructive work of Bliss, combined to provide an irritating and over-present blockage to the forwards of the East Lancers, and, by hard work, succeeded in not only holding the attack, but, in addition, provided their forwards with many an opportune opening.

Everest's Sound Play

Everest played a very sound game, and Eastman, though a trifle shaky under pressure, foiled many a promising effort on the part of O'Donnell and his men.

Boyce in the last line of defence, who had been called in place of Cord who, it seems, is likely to be absent on several Saturdays this season, was the surprise item of the match. In both anticipation and handling he was outstanding.

Lawton Life Of Team

Lawton, once again, was the life and soul of every defending and distributing movement of the East Lancers in defence and attack, providing the greatest source of worry to the Kowloon defence.

Working strenuously and well throughout, O'Donnell tried time after time to beat Boyce, but his

BORDERERS LACK FORWARDS

South China Accept Opportunities

Playing in front of the semi-erected form which they are going to defend in the Military Tattoo next month, the Borderers failed to defend their goal sufficiently at Sookunpo yesterday when they allowed South China to score three times without reply.

The Borderers had most of the game and deserved to win, but the forward line was not up to scratch and many glorious opportunities were missed.

Harrison played a very fine game, and so did Morgan, but their inside men, McGeorge and Thomas were very slow and did not back up at all well. Hayes was the man of the match, he played a great game, he fed the forwards well, and when he dropped back to assist the defence he cleared magnificently, using his head with wonderful precision. Williams played a great game in goal, but he was unfortunate, all three goals scored against him were gifts for the Chinese, a defender played the first one, dazed by the glaring sun he allowed the second to slip through his arms, and the third was a shot from a rebound off a very fine save. Williams, throughout the game, played a good game and saved some fine shots, but the Chinese were able opportunists and scored the goals. Hems played a good game at centre-half, but towards the latter part of the game he dropped off, seemingly discouraged by the wastage of his fine passes by a weak forward line.

Chinese Take Chances

The Chinese were nothing startling. They were always on the ball, and kept slinging it about, when chances offered they took them and thus recorded a victory. The backs played a great game for the Chinese, Ma Ping Chong and Cheung Ying Chuen never hesitating to clear strongly when the ball came anywhere near them. They were well assisted by Wan Cho Yoi who dropped back to make a third defender whenever the situation appeared difficult.

The first goal of the game was a very unlikely one for the Borderers. Li Wing-on drove in from just outside the area, and Martin, standing almost on the goal line, tried to stop it but deflected it into the net.

The second goal was scored soon after the commencement of the second half. Cheung Tak Fai sent in a drop shot from the wing. Williams watched it all the way, but, dazed by the glare of the sun, he allowed the ball to drop through his hands and into the net. The third goal was scored just on time. This Chinese made a concentrated attack, and after Williams had punched out a great shot from Lui Yui-kong, Li Wong-on met the ball and gave the custodian no chance with a terrific drive.

Borderers:—Williams (72); Martin, Reese, Whelan, Hems, Hayes; Addison, Thomas, Simmons, McGeorge and Morgan.

South China:—Tang Yat-ming; Ma Ping-chong, Cheung Ying-chuen; Harry Young, Ho Chi-wing, Wan Cho-lee; Tse Sui-yul, Li Wing-on, Lui Yui-kong, Cheung Tak-fai and Ip Yui-po.

efforts were unproductive. The inside forwards showed clever footwork in their movements, but like their leader, found great difficulty in penetrating further than the Kowloon back-line.

Kowloon's Strong Attack

Power and North had their work cut out to hold the Kowloon attack, but on the whole upheld their end well.

Of the two backs Swaine was by far the safer.

Following the kick-off, Boyce was called up on to divert two fast shots in rapid succession from O'Donnell, and his clearances were made in great style; soon after G. White at the other end, sent the Kowloon team ahead.

Kowloon's second goal came in the early stages of the second period when G. White netted once again. Smith reduced the lead some few minutes later, netting after a scramble in front of the Kowloon goal.

Kowloon:—Boyce; Everest, Eastman; Gilchrist, Bliss, Whitehead; T. Knox, Elliot; G. White, V. White, and D. Knox.

UNIVERSITY WAKE UP TOO LATE

Concede Four Goals In First Half

A very fast and exciting game, full of thrills, was seen at the Valley yesterday when the 2nd Bn. East Lancers Regt., defeated the University by 5 goals to 2.

In the first half the East Lancers swept everything before them and scored four times without reply. Their forward line combined well, Swain, Botting and Griffin, being outstanding, their passing being most accurate. Ridings, one of their most promising forwards, had an off day. Their defence had an easy task in the first half, but they were severely tested after the interval and they did well to prevent the University from scoring more than two goals.

The University played listlessly in the first half, but later became very active and were constantly making dangerous raids on the East Lancers' goal. Blake did not shine at all, and it was from their other wing that all the danger came. Goon played a hard working game at centre-forward.

Early Military Score

Griffin opened the scoring 10 minutes from the start following a centre from Swain. He added a second goal a little later after a fine solo run.

The third goal was scored following some pretty combination work by Botting, Ridings and Thorp, resulting in the latter netting with a hard drive. Botting made the total to four shortly before the interval.

A complete change came over the game after the interval. Reed scored a clever goal for the University from a well placed pass by Goon. A little later Reed again netted from a scrimmage in front of the East Lancers' goal.

The East Lancers however made sure of victory with a fifth goal, scored by Botting. Towards the end the East Lancers were hard pressed and Lee was unlucky when his shot hit the foot of the upright with Harmsworth well out of his goal.

East Lancers:—Harmsworth; Harwood, Steel; Holly, Thompson, Eckartley; Swain, Thorp, Botting, Ridings and Griffin.

University:—Lim; Lew, Ang; Law, H. N. Lee, Gorenchenko; Lee, Yung, Goon, Reed and Blake.

ARTILLERY SCORE ONLY GOAL

Kowloon's Listless Display

A listless game with both defences on top was seen at Chatham Road between the Artillery and Kowloon, the final result being 1-0 in the Gunners' favour.

The R.A.'s right wing, Rivers and Butterfield, combined well and sent many good centres over to Leach, the centre-forward, but he was decidedly off form. Mackhill well tried to do in goal, he had two very little defenders, Price and Hall, in front of him, and they rarely made a mistake. The half back line assisted both the defence and attack, Worthington being most outstanding.

The Kowloon forwards were very disjointed, their only trier being White. Fuxham, their pivot, played a very fine game, while McNider played brilliantly in goal. Hickman, however, was the most outstanding defender.

Late in the first half Butterfield received a long pass from Hunt and scored with a first timer.

Leach missed a chance of increasing the lead for the Gunners when he shot over the bar from a penalty kick.

Kowloon:—McNider; Cutter, Hickman; Willis, Fuxham, Tillery; Lee, McDonald, White, and Pereira.

Artillery:—Mackhill; Price, Hall; Worthington; Hunt, Birmingham; Rivers, Butterfield, Leach, Taylor and Harman.

LINCOLNS JUST WIN OVER EASTERN

Penalty Goal Equaliser

An exciting and very even encounter resulted in the Lincolns capturing a brace of points from Eastern by 2 goals to 1.

After having had most of the play during the first half Eastern broke away on the left, and from a centre by Sabian, Fung Choi Po opened the score a minute before the interval. In the first few minutes after the resumption, the soldiers pressed hard, and from a penalty, awarded for a foul in a scrimmage on the goal line, Matthews scored the equaliser. A ding-dong struggle ensued, in which Eastern had more than a fair share of the attacking, but towards the end Toyn passed to McGuinness who coolly placed the ball out of Da Silva's reach for the winning goal.

Da Silva, I. Haroon, and Fung Choi Po were outstanding for Eastern, while the remainder played well throughout, but the defence was often caught out of position.

The Lincolns forwards were very active, with McGuinness initiating all their movements. The defence was sound, Colebough tackling and clearing very cleanly.

Eastern:—Da Silva; Lee Bing-tong, Lai Ting-choi; Ng Ying-kay, Lau Kim-fai, Fung Yui-wai, Cheng Sui-hong, Fung Choi-po, Sung Ming-sing, I. Haroon and M. Sabian.

Lincolns:—Mackin; Dobbs, Colebough; Thomson, Wildy, Potter; Matthews, Evans, Setters, McGuinness and Toyn.

TWO PENALTIES IN DRAWN GAME

Young Indians' Player Sent Off

A very tame and dispirited game was seen at the Valley yesterday between the Young Indians and the Club. The result was a draw of one goal each, both goals being scored from a penalty.

The Young Indians were unlucky to drop a point as they certainly played the better football.

The Club played a disappointing game, their forward never looking like scoring. Sloan was far too slow on the left wing, and none of the forwards combined as a team. Farrow was a great success at centre-half and both backs, Blinnie and Krivolosky, played a sound game.

The Young Indians have a very clever forward line, Yusuff and Abbas being outstanding forwards. Omar and Wreath were sound in defence.

The Club took the lead after the interval through Farrow, who scored from a penalty, but they did not hold the lead for long. Blinnie handed the ball in the penalty area and Marker made no mistake from the spot kick and enabled his team to draw level.

Near the end Baker the Young Indians' right half was ordered off the field for fouling an opposing player. It seemed rather a harsh decision as he had not previously been warned for dirty play.

Young Indians:—Curran; Omar, Arculli; Baker, Sheikh, Marker, Yusuff, Abbas, Omar, Hamet and Ahmed.

Club:—Payne; Krivolosky, Blinnie; McKellar, Farrow, Bitter; Fisher, G. Williams, B. Williams, Sloan and Shevin.

Third Division

Borderers Too Good For Engineers

At the Valley yesterday the South Wales Borderers easily defeated the Royal Engineers by 6 goals to 1.

At half time the Borderers were leading by 3 goals to 1. Johns, Marshall and Solis having scored for the Borderers while Whitaker had netted for the Engineers.

After the interval the Borderers added three more goals through Marshall, Purcell and Solis.

Medicals Deserve Win Over Police

In a very entertaining match the R.A.M.C. defeated the Police by 2 goals to 1 on the Kowloon ground. Pym sent the R.A.M.C. ahead in the first half and in the second stage added another, while Kong Hing replied for the Police.

Player Ordered Off And Game Abandoned

A poor display of football was seen on the Railway ground between the home team and the Recorder.

All through the second half, tempers were frayed. Lee Hing-shuen, of the Railway, was ordered off, and several players were cautioned. This, however, had no effect and things became so bad that finally the referee was obliged to abandon the game 11 minutes from the end, with the Recorder leading by 5 goals to 2. Santos, d'Aquino, Ribeiro (2) and Campos scored for the Recorder, and Lan Cheong and Chong Lam scored for the Railway.

R.A.F. Retain Unbeaten Record

The R.A.F. retained their unbeaten record when they defeated the Radio by two goals to nil.

Hussen unfortunately put the ball through his own goal in the first half to give the R.A.F. the lead, and Tait scored a second goal for the R.A.F. to make victory assured. The Radio scored twice after the interval, but both goals were disallowed through a player being offside.

STRONG NAVY SIDE FOR TO-DAY

Will Thoroughly Test South China "A"

LEAGUE SOCCER PROGRAMME

To-day's big League Soccer attraction will be the clash at Caroline Hill between the Navy and the leading Chinese team, South China "A", the game commencing at 4.30 p.m.

Strengthened by the arrival yesterday of H.M.S. Eagle from the north, and other naval vessels during the week, the Navy are now able to field an eleven fully capable of wrestling honours from the Chinese team.

Two of last season's well-known Navy players, Forrest, and Shebrook, will make their first appearance, the former at right back and the latter at outside-left.

The new players are Solomon, Strong, and O'Donnell.

The team is: Pepper (Suffolk); Forrest (Eagle) and Solomon (Adventure); Pyatt (Suffolk), McGuire (Suffolk), Smith (Suffolk), Strong (Eagle), O'Donnell (Adventure) and Shebrook (Eagle).

The Chinese are confident of victory and are holding the same team that vanquished the Police a fortnight ago. The Chinese lineup will be as follows.

Wong Wai; Li Tin-wang, Lau Mau; Leung In-chun, Wong Mei-shun, Leung Wing-chiu; Lee Kwai-sing, Tan Kwong-park, Fung King-chung, Tai Kwee-lung and Ip Pak-wai.

Recreio's Loss

Weakened through the absence of A. V. Gosano and N. Beltrao, who are nursing injuries, the young Club de Recreio team will meet the Champions, the South Wales Borderers at Sookunpo, but are not expected to hold the soldiers.

After many weeks of disappointment through the inability of their star Canton players to make the trip to Hong Kong, the Chinese Athletic will now be seen at full strength for the first time, meeting the Royal Artillery on the Club ground.

Navy v. S. China "A"—Caroline Hill

Epic Air Race

Many of the machines will make their first stop at Marseilles, but four, entered by Aircraft Exchange and Mart, Ltd., Mrs. Melrose, Flight-Lt. G. Shaw, and the New Zealand Centenary Air Race Committee, hope to reach Rome without a stop.

Mr. Clyde E. Pangborn's monoplane and the Mollisons are said to be making for Bucharest, but a radio message received from the latter stated that owing to a favourable wind they hope to reach Baghdad non-stop.

Mr. A. O. Edwards, D. H. Comet and Mr. Bernard Rubin's D. H. Comet, two of the most favoured British planes, are also headed for Baghdad, where they hope to land before nightfall. Colonel Roscoe Turner's Boeing Transport plane is making for Athens.

BRITISH MESSAGE

Each of the British machines carries a message from the British Air Minister, Lord Londonderry, to the people of Australia. The contents of the message have not been divulged, but will be delivered by the first arrival at Melbourne.

The Irish Sweepstake Committee's plane, "The Irish Sweep", remains in its hangar. It was withdrawn at the eleventh hour by Colonel Fitzmaurice following the refusal of the race committee to allow him to enter with a load of 3,000 lbs. in face of the plane's certificate of airworthiness for only 5,400 lbs.

Colonel Fitzmaurice stated that he had no interest in the £10,000 prize (which if won would have been devoted to hospital charity), but wants to show his speedy Bellanca plane at its best. He intends to take it to Crocydon to complete the load landing test, secure a certificate, and start on Monday on the same route to try to beat the winner's time.

STACK FORCED DOWN?

Later.
The report that weather conditions over the Continent were not favourable proved correct when news came through from Abbeville, a town 26 miles north-west of Amiens, capital of the Somme Province, France, that Captain Neville Stack, one of Britain's brightest hopes, had been forced down by bad weather. And this only about three hours after his take-off.

Later reports, however, indicate that Captain Stack made a perfect landing. He had received reports that a thick fog lay ahead. He hopes to continue after refuelling.

The New Zealand Centenary Air Race Committee's entry and the New Guinea entry both made forced landings at or near Boulogne, the former with engine trouble.

ROME ARRIVAL

The giant Douglas D.C.2 entered by the K.L.M., a Dutch concern, arrived at Rome safely at 11.30 a.m., while the Lambert Monocoupe entered by the American, Mr. John H. Wright, reported at Lyons at 11.05 a.m.

Three planes reached Marseilles safely. The first to land was the Australian entry, owned by Mr. H. C. Miller, at 10.24 a.m. It took off again 25 minutes later. At 11.15 a.m. the plane entered by the Manawatu Aero Club landed, and was away again half an hour later. Another Australian entry, Mrs. Melrose's D. H. Gipsy Moth, landed at 12.08 p.m.

A further setback to Britain's hopes occurred when Mr. H. L. Brook, an owner-pilot, was forced down by bad weather at Plassis Luz Arches, near Paris, at about noon.

DUTCH PLANE LEADS

News of 15 machines has so far been received. The furthest reported afield is the K.L.M. entry which passed over Athens at 2.15 p.m.

Mr. J. K. C. Baines' plane had a forced landing near Lyons and has a slight split in the tail, but it has flown on to Marseilles.

Captain Stack has resumed his flight from Abbeville.—Router.

HUTCHISON SHINES FOR "A" FIFTEEN

Navy Side Beaten By Club Pack

A very keenly contested game was seen when the Club "A" fifteen defeated a Navy "A" fifteen by a goal and two tries (11 points) to a try (3 points) after being in arrears at the interval.

The game was scrappy, being decided at forward. The Club pack carried all before them in the second half.

The Navy three-quarters were actually better than their opposing numbers and should have got away with more than one try, but their passing in front of the Club posts was often wild.

The Club three-quarters were given ample scope, but the line was often disorganised by E. McGregor who hung on too long on frequent occasions.

Among the forwards Cumming, Castleton and Burch were very prominent while Garrod and Mountie dribbled well on occasion.

Hutchison's Fine Score

Hutchison was the outstanding player on view, his brilliant solo effort, which resulted in a very pretty try being perfectly executed.

Lt. Muspratt was very safe in the Navy defence and it was no fault of his that several tries were scored.

The Navy opened the scoring in the first half through Muspratt who took a pass from Jones to score in the corner.

In the second half the Club rallied and Hutchison brought the scores level as a result of a brilliant try when he beat three Navy defenders to score. Mountie failed with the kick.

From the kick-off a long punt forward saw Noble gather the ball in his stride to score the Club's second try. The kick again failed. There followed midfield play, the Navy missing a penalty goal and two attempts at dropped goals. Eventually, McGugan broke away and passed to Burch for the latter to cross and score the Club's third try. Castleton landed a very good goal.

Dr. J. A. R. Solby refereed and lined up the following:

Club:—R. Goldman; J. Hunter, D. K. Hishop, E. McGregor and K. Noble; P. J. Gardner and J. Hutchison; P. R. Burch, F. J. McGugan and M. S. Cumming; S. H. Garrod and R. I. Castleton; W. G. C. Knowles, R. G. Castleton and G. C. Mountie (Captain).
Navy "A":—Lt. Muspratt; A. B. Matthews, E. R. A. Gould, Sto. Jones and Lt. Comdr. Surtees (Captain); Sick Bay Att'd. Davis and A. B. Pink; Lt. Winney, Sick Bay Att'd. Jolly and A. B. McKinstry; E. R. A. Hobbs and Mid. Sparway; Mid. Vivian, Mid. Stacey and Sto. P. O. Altringham.

He devoted the evening to the Camden Town journey, found the photographer at home, and, again using fiction out of its true purpose of entertainment, announced that he was connected with a West End theatre which sought to dress its new show with London's Loveliest Chorus, and that the lady of the cigarette-poster had caught the manager's eye. Where could she be found?

The photographer, whose name, incredible as it may appear, was Anastasius Herrick, was an affable and unaffected young man, although he wore a velvet coat and silken hair and the rest of the make-up which marks the cameraman from the common artist. He received his visitor with a friendly and honest smile. And after the smile he said: "Blimey! And then, 'Blimey'—now you've done me. I took that picture—lemme see—coupler years ago. Friend o' mine—City man—brought her along. I only dug it up about three months ago. Occurred to me that it might suit the Poo-Jah cigarette people. They was using girls just then. So I bunged it along to my agents. They took it like a shot. Nice price, too. But where she is now—ah! One thing I can tell you. She used to live at Kensington—89, Grimlace-road. Whether she's there now... Might be o' course. Might not. Still, it's worth trying. Nice girl, she was. Iris Lone was her name."

So the next night he made long and serious preparation for a meeting with his goddess, and was as particular about his toilet as the Messrs. Ricordi are about the use of two bars of Puccini's music.

When he was as near to satisfaction with the toilet as a young lover can hope to be he put on his best suit and his best hat, which made him look slightly ridiculous, and went to Grimlace-road, which is not one of the best roads of Kensington.

He knocked at the door of the house to which he had been directed, and when it was answered he took off his ridiculous hat and asked for Miss Iris Lone.

The agreeable person who answered the door told him that Mrs. Lone and her daughter had lived here as paying-guests, but had left a year ago. When he asked if the agreeable person knew the address to which they had moved, she said she did not; and when he pressed for clues, she had none to give, save that Mrs. Lone had had an account at the local branch of the Imperial Bank whose manager would surely know her present address.

So the next day, by an unconvincing excuse of illness, he contrived to leave the office after lunch, and to reach the Kensington branch of the Imperial Bank before closing time. He asked to see the manager, and, after some minutes spent in a glass cage, he was conducted to the manager. He took off his ridiculous hat and placed it on the manager's desk, and asked for the present address of a client of the bank, Mrs. Lone.

You need not be troubled with his adventures in this office, for we are all aware that there are two things which can seldom be extracted from bank managers, and the other one is information. The manager fixed his eyes on the ridiculous hat, and while his lips said that he regretted that his position debarred him from giving information concerning his clients, his eyes sang loudly: "Where did you get that hat?"

So the ridiculous hat went away, and went back to Grimlace-road, Kensington, and knocked again at the house that had once sheltered the world's beauty. This time our young man made a rapid pass of his hand to the hand of the agreeable person who answered the door, and besought her to ransack her memory for some clue to the present whereabouts of Mrs. Lone.

Whereupon the agreeable person recalled that Mrs. Lone had removed her goods to an address unknown by the aid of a firm of furniture removers whose premises were to be found in a street near Olympia.

Well, the young man went from Grimlace-road to the premises of the furniture removers, and there, in the cause of romance, which is the world's first and best lie, he lied again. He represented himself as a nephew of the family returned from the colonies—to which the ridiculous hat was confirmation—and begged them to search their records for the address to which the family moved.

Very courteously—being a commercial house—they searched their records, and within 20 minutes they gave him the new address of the family. The new address where he might see glory and loveliness face to face. They remarked on the address. They said that families often moved from that place to Kensington, in the natural course of progress, but seldom from Kensington to that place.

"What place?" said our young man.

"That place," they said, indicating the paper which, such was his excitement, he had not even looked at.

When he looked at it, although, when in company, he was a young man of sober deportment, he said: "Good God! The address was 16, Jasmine-terrace, Poplar."

For the last twelve months she had been living in his own street. There would be no need for him to battle round the world in quest of beauty. She was in his own street.

Which is where (said old Quong, reaching for the jar of rice-spirit) beauty always lives.

At least (he added, reaching for a glass), so they tell me. But he never saw her beauty again. He married her, and the rest of his life he spent in looking for more advertisement-posters.

ARRESTED AFTER 23 YEARS

Notorious Dacoit On Murder Charge

Jaipur.

"I arrest you for murder." This was said to Moti Singh, aged 72, of Jaipur, 23 years after he had committed a murder.

Moti Singh was a member of a notorious gang of Dacoits who, in settling a grudge with a rival gang, hacked their leader to pieces.

With the police hot on their trail, Moti Singh's gang broke up, and although rewards amounting to hundreds of pounds were offered for their capture, none of the gang could be found. All this happened in 1911.

Recently an Indian mounted constable of the Jaipur Armed Police was strolling through the bazaar in the village of Jauhari when he saw in a motorcar an old man whose face seemed familiar.

He followed him for about an hour around the village. Suddenly he remembered Moti Singh, the dacoit, and associated him with the old man.

Without hesitation, he rode up to the car, and calmly said to the retired dacoit, "Moti Singh. I arrest you for murder."

Nearly all of the eye-witnesses of the 1911 murder are still alive, including the doctor who conducted the post mortem, so the prosecution had an unbreakable, cast-iron case.

HOWLER GEMS

"Napoleon Escaped From Melba"

HORSE-POWER DEFINED

Mr. Cecil Hunt has long been a collector of "howlers," and readers, already indebted to his assiduity for many diverting moments, will not be disappointed by Latest Howlers (Harrap, 1s. 6d., latest published).

Examples of this form of unconscious humour are provided, day in, day out, in schools throughout the country by ignorant or confused youth. And Mr. Hunt, to judge from the excellence of his specimens, appears to have first pick.

He does not guarantee every howler as genuine; adult ingenuity is not idle in this entertaining field, but few of Mr. Hunt's examples suggest the burning of midnight oil.

The following have all the air of spontaneity:—

"Napoleon escaped from Melba." "The three parts of the human eye are the pupil, the beam, and the mote."

"Bigotry is an obstinate attachment to more than one wife."

Translation is a rich field for howlers. Here are some examples.

"Les mortels sont si bêtes. Mortals are such beasts."

"Rubbish," said her father. "Dobris," responded son pere."

Original Complexion

"Prima facie. Original complexion."

Among some gems of definition are these:

"Horse-power is the distance one horse can carry a pound of water in an hour."

"An equilateral triangle is one that looks the same whichever end you stand it on."

"A tripod is an extinct animal with four legs and a trunk buried in the ice."

In many howlers there is a glimmer of sound sense. One boy, for instance, declared that "the Romans made their roads straight so that the Britons could not hide round the corners."

OPIUM SMOKING INCREASE

U.S. Narcotics Bureau Revelation

Washington.

Opium smoking, which in recent years had declined in the United States, is showing an "alarming increase," the Narcotics Bureau of the Treasury Department has revealed.

Seizures of smoking opium by Federal agents last year totalled 748 lb., or twice as much as in 1932. Officials made no secret of the fact that they view the development with alarm.

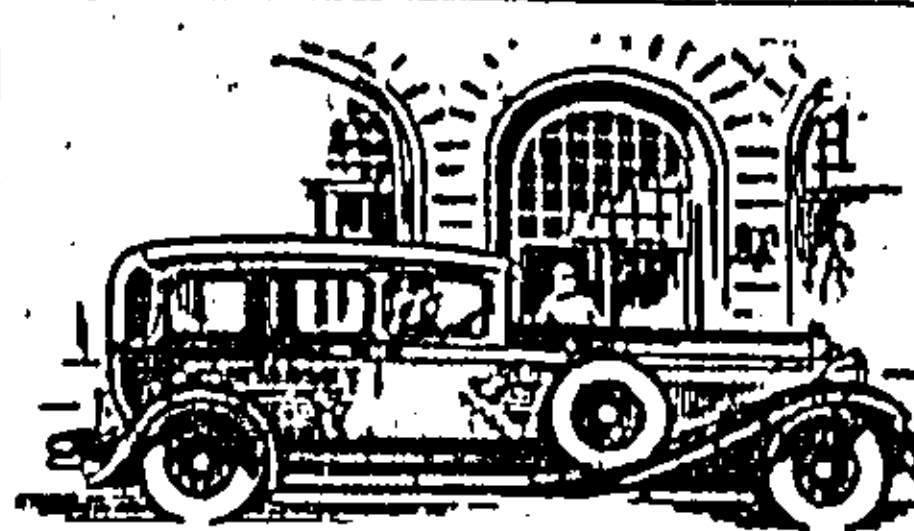

Practically all of the prepared opium seized, the records disclosed, came from China and appeared to be mostly a blend of the Chinese and Persian product.

The heaviest seizures were on the Pacific Coast, in the Hawaiian Islands and in the Philippines, nearly all of the drug coming to these areas by ship from the Far East.

The price in the illicit traffic remained about the same as in 1932, but officials said this was due to the increased demand taking up the additional supply believed to be available.

Although the opium traffic has increased, Government officials reported increases in the seizures of heroin and cocaine.

Most of the heroin smuggled into the country came from French ports, while the cocaine seized was of Swiss origin.

MOTERING NOTES

SIX VOLT LIGHTING SYSTEM

How To Secure More Satisfaction

WATCH THE BATTERIES

Motorists whose cars are fitted with 6 volt lighting systems may find that a more efficient system is necessary when extra electrical equipment is fitted or when light and starter have to give exceptionally heavy service.

The following details will enable a six volt system to be made more satisfactory under these conditions.

To get satisfaction from a six volt system, it requires the following alterations:—

(a) Thicker wires should be fitted for the headlights.

(b) Have your batteries always well charged, and see that the dynamo begins to charge at a very low speed. Best results in this respect can be had by fitting a voltage regulation device to the existing dynamo. Then, if the battery breaks down, the lights and ignition can still be used without any danger.

While 6 volt lighting equipments are in general use on small and medium passenger cars, it is a well-known fact that even in the United States or in Great Britain, where six volt sets have found the widest application, motor-boats, passenger buses and other vehicles working under particularly severe conditions are equipped with 12 or even 24 volt lighting and starting sets, amongst which the Bosch constant voltage system has become prominent.

TRANSPORT JOTTINGS

In "Motor Transport," references are made to:

A single-seated motor car now on the market which is barely two yards long and has a speed of 15 m.p.h.

A vehicle fitted out to fry fish and chips and act as a bar for selling them.

A miniature delivery van specially built to match a diminutive employee of a laundry. He acts as driver and roundsman.

An Italian bus which draws coaches behind like a train.

A complete grocer's shop on wheels, and

A scale model of a house on a bus chassis.

BRITISH CAR BODIES TO BE LARGER

Result Of Taxation Reduction

Next year, thanks to reducing the horse-power tax to 15s. for each unit, there is likely to be an increase in the demand for cars rather larger than those which have hitherto proved most popular.

In this matter of body space foreign cars, which have not been designed with one eye on the Treasury rating of the engine, frequently offer advantages. Not a

CAMPAIGN FOR CAR SILENCE

London Noise Can Be Avoided

SPEED CAN BE SILENCED

London.

When the new Road Traffic Act was before the House of Lords they inserted, in the face of Governmental opposition, a clause making it an offence to sell a car without an efficient silencer. Manufacturers would be wise to take that hint as to the strength of public feeling about avoidable motor noises (writes A. G. Throssell, the "Daily Telegraph" Motoring correspondent).

On hot summer nights not the most enthusiastic devotee could deny that the motor-car can be excruciatingly offensive. It is true that the offence is as often as not due to the driver rather than to the vehicle.

If he is thoughtless or selfish enough, he can make almost any car rowdy by accelerating violently in indirect gear, and manufacturers can hardly be expected yet to produce hog-proof as well as fool-proof cars. But they still pander to that small-boy ideal of a "sports" car as a machine which, whatever else it may do, produces an audible simulacrum of power.

From John Cobb's 450-h.p. 170-m.p.h. Napier-Builton downwards there are cars of every size to prove that speed can be silenced without undue loss of power, at any rate on the ground, and if makers would combine against the noisy exhaust the idea that it was "sporty" would quickly die.

GOODWILL ON THE ROAD

Competition For Private Owners

London.

"Cultivate a spirit of good fellowship on the road. We want goodwill among the different types of road users, more attention to setting a good example and appreciating the courtesies received than to abusing the failings of the few."

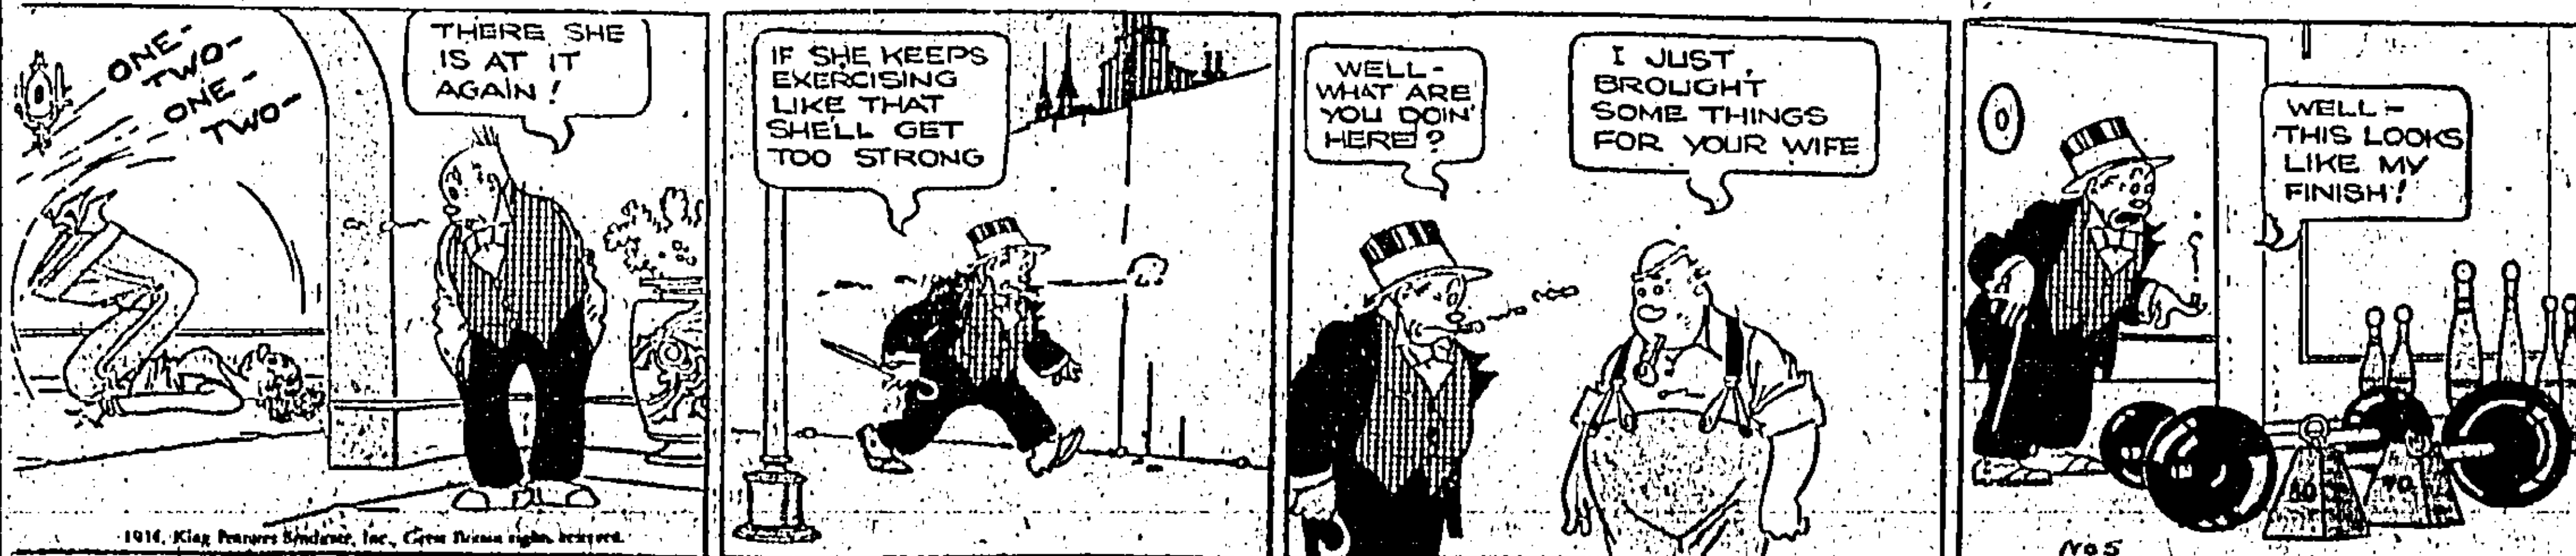

In these words H.R.H. the Duke of York once pleaded for a better spirit of behaviour, and it was as the result of his speech that the Road Fellowship League was founded, with the object of breaking down antagonism amongst road users.

A particular scheme which deserves to attract much attention is a safe-driving competition for private owners on the lines of the safe-driving competition for professional drivers organised by the National "Safety First" Association, in which no fewer than 60,000 entries have been obtained. Far more can be achieved by the exercise of friendly courtesy and consideration between all sections of road users, by the elimination of antagonism, than by any amount of legislation.

Most taxicabs average more than 35,000 miles a year.

few British car bodies could be appreciably enlarged without materially reducing the vehicles' performance. We believe that this question has not been overlooked in British designs for 1935.—"The Autocar."

TAKING STOCK OF SITUATION

(By LADY RHODES)

The taking of unnecessary risks in play is one of the commonest causes of failure to make contracts.

It is, of course, quite clear to any contract player that it is the height of folly to risk the game for the sake of one or more over-tricks.

But, more often than not, this risk is taken unknowingly, simply and solely because the declarer will not take stock of the situation from the beginning and is, therefore, playing a planless game.

Here are two examples of this type of play which I have recently seen. In the first case North and South had reached a contract of four Hearts. Their hands were:

North	South
S.—Q 7	S.—J 10 2
H.—Q J 10 6 3 2	H.—A 9 4
D.—A Q	D.—K 5
C.—A J 2	C.—K 7 6 5 3

And the bidding had been: N. 1 Heart, S. 2 Clubs, N. 3 Hearts, S. 4 Hearts.

(East and West did not bid.)

East opened with the nine of Clubs, West played the Queen, and North took the trick with Ace. She then led the Queen of Hearts and finessed. West won the trick and, after leading the King of Spades, returned a Club, which East then led back a Spade, as West, by her lead of the King, had indicated that she held the Ace. North was thus one down.

Due To Poor Play

Though the declarer thought she had been unlucky, her failure was really due to poor play.

After winning the first trick, she should have seen that she could afford to lose two tricks in Spades and one in Hearts. If, as seemed not unlikely, East's Club was a singleton, the obvious course was to take two rounds of trumps at once. She should have led the Queen of Hearts and, if East had not "obliged" with the King, played dummy's Ace and returned the nine.

Unfortunately she was one of a large number of players who seem to find it quite impossible to resist a finesse.

The opponents' hands were:

East	West
S.—9 8 6 4 3	S.—A K 5
H.—8 5	H.—K 7
D.—J 7 6 3 2	D.—10 9 8 4
C.—9	C.—Q 10 8 4

In the second example North was playing 3 No Trumps, having opened with 2 No Trumps and been raised to 3 by her partner. The hands were:

North	South
S.—A K 4	S.—8 2
H.—A 6 4 3	H.—Q 8 2
D.—A K 6	D.—7 5 3
C.—K 3 2	C.—A Q 7 5 4

East opened with the Queen of Spades. The declarer won with the King and led her King of Clubs, followed by a small one, on which she played dummy's Queen. On this trick West dropped the two of Diamonds. North continued with the Clubs, hoping to be able to get into dummy with the Queen of Hearts if East held the King.

The Planning Habit

East, on winning the fourth round of Club, led the Knave of Spades; when North refused to take the trick she then switched

PACIFIC LINER

A "MONSTER"Novelists Description Of

QUEER COINCIDENCE

Wellington. Passengers on the s.s. Maunani (7500 tons), which arrived here recently from San Francisco, described how the liner had twice struck objects which were believed to be marine monsters—once on the outward and once on the home-ward trip.

On the outward trip, between Papeete and San Francisco, the vessel ran into a "sea monster" which Mr. Zane Grey, the famous novelist and fisherman, who was among the passengers, estimated to be about 50 feet long and 10 feet across the nose.

By an extraordinary coincidence the liner is reported to have again struck a sea monster on its return trip in about the same latitude.

A tremor was felt as the bows of the vessel cut into the animal, and the Maunani had to go astern to free itself from the carcass, which slid down into the depths.

A passenger who left the ship at Papeete took cinema pictures of the strange occurrence.

to the seven of Hearts. The declarer played dummy's Queen, which West covered with the King, and North was one down, making only two tricks in Spades, one in Hearts, two in Diamonds, and three in Clubs.

Though this hand is not so easy as the previous one, the correct play should not be difficult to anyone who has cultivated the planning habit.

North's reasoning should have been thus: "I have to make nine tricks. I have already taken one in Spades and can see one more in that suit, one in Hearts, and two in Diamonds, making five so far. I therefore only need four in Clubs for my contract. If either opponent holds four Clubs and West has the King of Hearts, I shall not be able to get into dummy if I have to lose the fourth Club trick."

"Even if East has the Heart King, so that I can get into dummy, it will be too late if East holds five spades, as she will then have cleared the suit, and the opponents must make three Spades, one Club, and the King of Hearts. After leading the King of Clubs, I will, therefore, play a small one and let them have the trick, keeping my remaining small Club to put dummy in."

Played in this way the contract is certain, unless either opponent holds all the five missing Clubs; in which case only three tricks can be made in the suit, however played.

The opponents' hands were:

East	West
S.—Q J 10 7 5	S.—9 6 3
H.—7 5	H.—K J 10 9
D.—10 4	D.—Q J 9 8 2
C.—J 10 9 6	C.—8

In hands of this type, where dummy holds no certain re-entry, it is not safe to assume that the long suit will run off. Of course, if dummy had held a re-entry, there would have been no point in ducking the Clubs. Equally, had five tricks in Clubs been necessary (if, for instance, the declarer had held A, x, x instead of A, K, x, in Diamonds), the risk would have had to be taken even with no re-entry in dummy.

Moscow. Trained wolves can be more useful in Arctic work than the more usual sled-dog in the opinion of Professor Munteufel of the Moscow Zoo.

Two of the Zoo's wolves, Kashir and Kashirka, have been tamed so that they sit at the professor's feet during lectures and walk unleashed and unmuzzled.

On two occasions the female, Kashirka, has escaped to the streets of the city; but each time she has returned peacefully to her cage, on her own initiative.

TOWN TERRORISED
BY MAD WOLFFour-Year-Old Child
Carried Off

A mad wolf terrorised the town of Fazl in Amnolia. After having attacked a buffalo which was feeding on the outskirts of the town the wolf penetrated into the town itself.

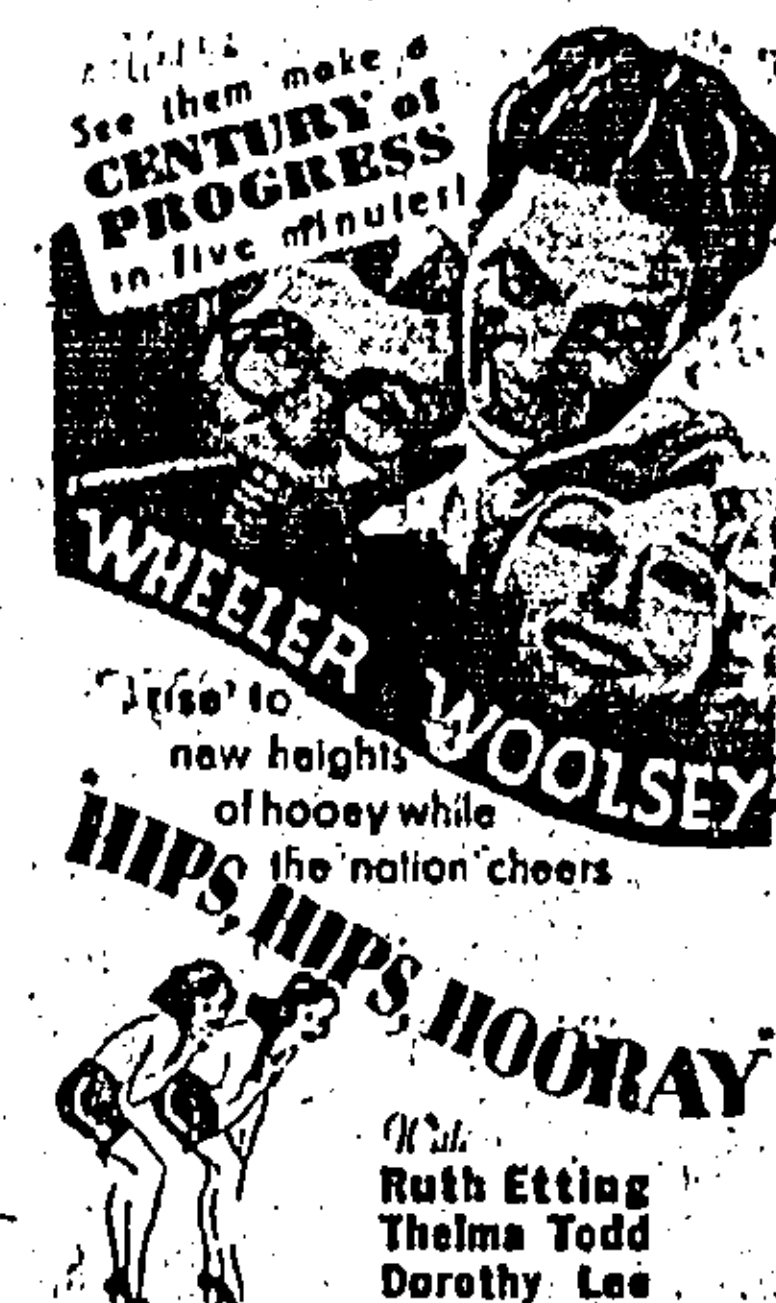

Entering a house it carried off a four-year-old child which was sleeping.

Alarmed at the cries of the child the parents and some neighbours chased the wolf and rescued the infant but not before several pursuers had been bitten.

Finally gendarmes shot the wolf. Altogether 16 men, two women, the kidnapped child and four buffaloes were bitten by the wolf.—Central News.
